EARLY FUEL RELIEF PROMISED

BOHEMIAN ON CAPE SAMBRO

Grounds Near Halifax, N. C., in Snowstorm and Passengers Taken Off

Three large vessels, one of them a trans-Atantic liner with 184 persons listed, are in difficulty today as a result of a heavy snow and windstorm on the Atlantic.

The Leyland liner Bohemian, which sailed from Boston, Saturday, went ashore on a rock off Cape Sambro during the height of a snowstorm after midnight. Captain Hiscoe at once wirelessed for help. Tugs and steamers were sent from Halifax, the passengers were taken off and sent to that port. Other ships are standing by to help in pulling the Bohemian off in the event of a high tide coming up.

From off Nantucket wireless calls for help have been received from the steamer Hilton of 2,160 tons register. The message stated the steamer was drifting in the face of a gale and without fuel.

The Cape Race wireless station has picked up calls for aid from the Shipping Board steamer Davidson County. The Davidson County has had a tempestuous voyage from Rotterdam for

BLUE LAW PROBLEM IS UP IN PLYMOUTH

Plymouth, March 1.—An attempt to revive the blue laws of 1909 by inserting in the town warrant an article permitting the licensing Board to grant or refuse to grant licenses for the sale of ice cream, confectionery, tonics, and fruit on Sundays has aroused some excitement here. It will be a storm center at the town meeting Saturday. If carried in the negative the sale of ice cream, candy, fruit and soft drinks will be prohibited here on Sundays.

GOODWIN ASSUMES DUTIES OF REGISTRAR

Eviction of Newton Widow Halted

Evicting landlords of Newton may take warning from one Alessandro Bordone, who has been restrained by the State Commission on the Necessaries of Life from evicting a Newton widow and her five children from their apartment. The commission granted the woman permission to stay in her present home till warm weather, either May or June.

Bordone, who owned the apartment house where the widow lived, got out an ejection writ for her. She appeared in court last Saturday morning, in answer. City Solicitor Bartlett appealed to the State Board on the Necessaries of Life, which sent down the order for the widow to remain. There was no question of nonpayment of rent in this case as rent had been tendered by the widow a month in advance.

ALLIED FLEET TO HALT TURKS

Supreme Council Decides to Land Marines, Following Report of Outrages

By International News Service.

London, March 1.—A naval demonstration by British, French and Italian squadrons in Turkish waters and the landing of marines in Cilicia and at Constantinople were ordered by the supreme council today as a result of continued reports of Turkish outrages against Christians.

Cilicia is included in the vilayet of Adana, in Southern Anatolia, on the Mediterranean coast. While the allied powers were debating the terms of the Turkish treaty in London reports were received that the Turks had begun fresh massacres of Armenians in that district. The attacks were said to have spread to other foreigners and Americans were reported in danger.

THIN GOWN IN NELSON TRIAL

Husband Objected to Wife's Transparent Clothing. He Testifies

Transparent gowns which showed his wife's legs to above the knee and dances at the Tedesco Country Club which she attended without corsets were among the troubles in the marital life of Ernest Nelson, he testified today in his suit for divorce against his wife, Mrs. Eva Nelson, being heard at Cambridge.

In 1912, he said, she appeared at the Terrace Gables, Falmouth Heights, in a flimsy gown through which her limbs were visible. At his suggestion, she put on petticoats. On another occasion he objected because she went to a dance at the Tedesco Country Club without corsets. He also objected to her long telephone conversations with men, and to her manner of dancing.

Unhappiness began six months after his marriage, he said, George N. Leghorn, sales manager of an automobile company of Boston, being the cause. His wife left her clothes on the floor and did not take proper care of their rooms, he declared. On one occasion his wife, a Miss Hertig of Jamaica Plain, Leghorn and a Mr. Crocker were together in an up-

Biggest City Budget Sent to Council

The biggest budget in the history of Boston, totalling $30,404,562.29 for city and Suffolk county expenses, was turned over to the City Council by Mayor Peters today after he had slashed $1,180,000 from the estimates.

The tax limit of $18.52 would have been insufficient to meet the needs of the city were it not for the immense surplus created by the tax drive, Mayor Peters points out. The sum of $1,750,000 was withdrawn from the surplus fund to meet local requirements.

Savings of $300,000 were effected by refusing salary increases to city employes deemed not to have earned them and by failure to fill vacancies.

Despite economies, the budget totals nearly $2,000,000 more than last year. The total for city expenses is $22,603,358.41 and for city debt requirements $5,486,942.36, a total of city expenses amounting to $28,084,201.77, to which is added the county expense and debt requirements amounting to $30,404,562.29.

Included in the budget is $1,300,000 for increased salaries, $150,000 for further motorization of the fire department, $40,000 for the installation of oil burning equipment in the power house at City Hospital, $5,000 for scientific investigation at City Hospital in the field of preventive medicine, $30,000 to convert the measles ward in the South Department of City Hospital into an isolation building.

The mayor in a message accompanying the budget states it is his intention to appropriate $400,000 for a new ferry boat for the East Boston service, and states that $200,000 additional may be granted to the public works department for snow removal.

'STRIKERS' STAY ON POLICE DUTY

McDonald and Dunham, Penalties Suspended, Are Transfered

Matthew McDonald and Eldridge Dunham, two of the 1,400 policemen whose positions on the Boston force Commissioner Curtis declared vacant last September, have been transferred from the stations to which they were formerly assigned to others in the city.

These two men, whose names and records have been carried at the stations as discharges for doing duty, the former in the North End and the latter in Roslindale.

Both were strikers. Neither went on strike on the night of September 9, but did subsequently.

Striking policemen see in their restoration to duty an opening by means of which still others of the strikers can be reinstated, despite the fact that Secretary Devlin and others have said that not one striker shall be taken back.

McDonald and Dunham were two of a group of four strikers who were tried by a trial board consisting of Captains Reardon, Murphy and Fitzgerald.

Of the other two, Thomas Lombard

Rapid progress was made today in the trial of Joseph Sammarco, self-confessed slayer of Patrolman William G. Clancey, before Judge John F. Brown in Superior Court.

Lawyers predicted that the Sammarco case would prove one of the quickest murder trials in Massachusetts history.

Five jurors were chosen before the noon recess and indications were that a jury would be secured long before the panel of 125 was exhausted.

RAILROAD EMBARGO LIFTED

Outward Bound Freight, Coal and Food Supplies Are Moving Again

Speedy relief for storm-bound and fuel-hungry New England was promised today in an optimistic statement by Philip R. Allen, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee on the railroad emergency.

Mr. Allen declared the outlook more encouraging than at any time in weeks. He announced the lifting of all railroad embargoes on outbound freight tomorrow, and predicted a steady improvement in the general situation.

The Chamber of Commerce official's optimism did not find an echo in all quarters, and there was still alarm in manufacturing centres over the seriousness of the outlook.

Other developments today in the railroad, fuel and provisions situation were:

Cape Cod Canal closed by order of the government, with a consequent tying up of dozens of food and fuel ships.

Governor Coolidge wires Secretary of War Baker protesting the closing of the canal, and suggesting that it be postponed until fair weather.

Thousands of volunteer snow shovelers work on the New Haven and Boston & Maine lines, in answer to the appeal of the Chamber of Commerce.

News from Washington indicates that President Wilson has by executive order left the control of the cost situation in the hands of the Railroad Administration.

WOOD WILL FIGHT LOWDEN IN ILLINOIS

New York, May 1.—Announcement was made here today at the headquarters of General Leonard Wood, candidate for the Republican nomination for President, that he would make a fight to capture the Illinois delegation to the national convention. The announcement definitely set at rest reports that General Wood would concede the State to Governor Lowden as a "favorite son." It was stated General Wood would make an address at Manchester, N. H., March 6.

CHARGE CLOTH WAS STOLEN IN TRANSIT

Two former employes of the American Railway Express Company were arraigned before Commissioner Hayes today charged with stealing cloth which was in transit from New York. Both were held in $500 for the Grand Jury. They were Frederick Whittey of Bowen street, South Boston, charged with the larceny of fifty yards valued at $200, and Thomas McCloskey, Millwood street, Dorchester, fifty-four yards valued at $200.

NEW YORK INCOME TAX LAW UPHELD

Washington, March 1.—The income tax law of New York, which imposes a tax on non-residents on the privilege of carrying on a business in New York was upheld by the Supreme Court today. The law was challenged as unconstitutional by residents of New Jersey and Connecticut who do business in New York and was brought by the Tale & Towne Manufacturing Company of Connecticut against the tax collector of New York.

Put Out 2 Fires on a Single Trip

Putting out two fires on one trip is the Waltham Fire Department's way of proving efficient. While speeding today to the home of John Deagon, No. 176 River street, where an oil heater had started a blaze, the apparatus was halted at the railroad track by lowered gates.

Inquiry by Chief George Johnson developed that there was "a train on fire." The rear car of the 10:40 from Waltham to Boston had a blaze under the flooring, which the apparatus extinguished, after which it proceeded to the Deagon home and put out Fire No. 1, for which a still alarm had been rung.

IGNORE FLAG IN SALE OF SHIPS

Navy Disposes of 150 Vessels Without Any Restrictions to Registry

By International News Service.

Washington, March 1.—More than 150 vessels of all classes, the largest of which was the Cambridge, of 3,999 tons displacement, have been sold by the Navy Department without restriction as to their future registry under the American flag, Secretary of the Navy Daniels today informed the Senate in response to a Senate resolution.

The Secretary declared that law officers of the Navy Department contended the law relative to prohibiting registry transfer did not apply to vessels under control of the Navy Department during the war.

Two of the larger of the coastwise vessels, the Yale and the Charlon, of 3,721 tons, have been offered for sale by the department under the same conditions. The department has fifty other vessels, including the Nopatin, of 2,523 tons, and the steam vessel, the yacht Zara, of 184 tons, has been sold to a foreign purchaser, as far as is known," the secretary says. "This vessel was transferred to Greek registry by permission of the Shipping Board."

ARRESTS URGED BY FERNALD

Maine Senator Declares Federal Corporation Made $1 a Bushel in Sales of Wheat

Washington, March 1.—Profiteering by the Federal Grain Corporation in the sale of wheat was charged in the Senate today by Senator Fernald, Republican, of Maine. "The grain corporation has made $1 a bushel on grain," Fernald declared. "If this is true, as the reports indicate, the officers of the grain corporation should be arrested for grand larceny."

"The Federal Trade Commission is prosecuting small dealers for profiteering, while this Federal agency has made a dollar on a bushel of wheat," Fernald said.

Fernald referred to the recent finding of the State Grand Jury at Spokane, Wash., and had read the view of that body on the situation. The finding charged profiteering and the accumulation of large profits by the grain corporation and attributed the high cost of flour as a result.

Jury Involves Hoover in Wheat Conspiracy

Washington, March 1.—The report formulated by the Federal Grand Jury at Spokane, Wash., involving the United States Grain Corporation in an alleged "billion-dollar manipulation" by wheat speculators, and affecting directly every bread consumer in the nation, was received by the Department of Justice about the middle of February.

The report, amazing in detail and striking to the heart of an alleged system of secret "jockeying" of the bread market, was made February 7. It was pigeon-holed by the Department of Justice.

Responding to the urgings of M. H. Houser, one of the vice-presidents of the United States Grain Corporation, and who is accused virtually of having profiteered in the sale of wheat while holding a government office, and the strong recommendations by Julius H. Barnes, head of the Grain Corporation, the Department of Justice later "got busy."

Although the department had shelved the recommendations of the

SPEEDY RELIEF OF FOOD AND FUEL TIEUP PROMISED NEW ENGLAND

RAILROADS BEGIN RUNNING NEARER TO NORMAL

tration, with James J. Storrow in charge for New England.

The Boston & Maine has raised embargoes on outgoing freight, beginning tomorrow. The New Haven officials hope to take similar action before tomorrow night. On the Boston & Albany, never in such bad shape as the other roads, a return to "almost normal" was reported today.

MANY CARS RELEASED.

J. P. Quilty, traffic manager for the Boston & Maine, reported the situation better than at any time in the last three weeks, with the tracks of the system already nearly 70 per cent. clear. Hundreds of freight cars buried for weeks have been released, to the great relief of New England manufacturers.

On New Haven 400 loaded freight cars were set in motion yesterday, and 500 were released today. This road is still tied up at Myricks Junction, near Taunton; at the Randolph and Stoughton junction, and in Framingham. It is hoped, however, that the efforts of railroad employes and volunteer snow shovelers will soon show results at the points mentioned.

Chairman Allen today estimated that close to 10,000 volunteers answered the "dig out" call yesterday, and today, being loaned by big manufacturing plants and apportioned between the New Haven and Boston & Maine.

The closing of Cape Cod Canal constitutes the most serious development of the day, temporarily ending shipping there, despite the efforts of employes who stuck to their posts without pay. Following urgent appeals by public-spirited citizens, the highway bridges at Sagamore and Bourne were kept open by the regular bridge tenders, although these men were removed from any payroll at midnight. The closing of the canal by the government followed the refusal of the private owners, the Boston, Cape Cod & New York Company, to take it back from Federal control.

COAL STILL DELAYED.

The situation in many of the outlying districts remained serious, notwithstanding the optimistic predictions of Mr. Allen and others. There were still many coal cars snowblocked in distant yards, and comparatively little coal was received in Boston.

Conditions approaching a food famine were reported from isolated sections on Cape Cod and elsewhere, although relief was being hastened. Practically the entire Cape district was suffering for want of coal, and at Buzzard's Bay families were reported joining forces in one house to conserve fuel.

The efforts of the volunteer snow shovelers had gratifying results today on the two railroads worst affected by the recent storms. On the Boston & Maine 10,000 men, including volunteers and regular employes, were engaged in the work of liberation. Four thousand volunteers were at work on the New Haven, in addition to the regular force of employes.

R. R. Union Leaders Again Talk Strike

By International News Service.

Washington, March 1.—All organizations in the new railroad union alliance, will prepare strike machinery to meet the first hostile move of the railroad companies against the unions, leaders here said today.

There is general dissatisfaction over the President's reply. Leaders are worried over the outcome. The general sentiment is that they will leave it to a vote of the respective memberships of their organizations to pass approval or disapproval on the President's answer.

No word has yet come from Allan H. Barker, president of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes and Railroad Shop Laborers. The belief here is that he will now put his strike order into effect and a walkout of the 400,000 members of the union is expected within a few days.

Strong resentment against President Wilson for failure to act favorably on the wage demands of the railroad unions before the lines were turned back to private ownership was voiced here today by officials of the brotherhoods.

"We have had a raw deal," said J. B. Maloy, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes and Shop Workers. "We have had one from the government ever since 1918. The President asked us to postpone our strike and we did so. Now he comes back and does not even bother to write his letter and gives nothing whatever to the railroad workers.

"We have men who are working for $2.25 a day and the highest is paid only $39 a week.

"Since September 1 we have been waiting for relief, and now the President asks us to wait still longer. We are tired of waiting."

The brotherhood officials decided to say what would be their next step in connection with the new demands they urged on the government before it got rid of the roads.

Delegates from 1,600,000 union railroad shopmen, representing every railroad line in the country, are in Washington demanding immediate strike action.

They declare some railroad companies are already preparing to return to pre-war conditions in their relations to the men.

W. M. Jewell, acting president of the railroad employes' department of the American Federation of Labor and other leaders are advising the men to prepare strike machinery, but to withhold action until the railroad companies precipitate trouble.

Biscoe Again Vice-President of B. & A.

With the resumption today of private control of the Boston & Albany Railroad, the following officials have been appointed: Howard M. Biscoe, vice-president; Adam Haug, auditor; W. E. Adams, special assistant to the vice-president; R. Van Ummerson, freight traffic manager.

Mr. Biscoe was reappointed. During the period of Federal control of the railroads he was President Wilson's agent of the Boston & Albany. Mr. Haug is newly appointed, and Mr. Van Ummerson promoted.

The Union Pacific office, located here Federal control as No. 175 Washington street, reopened, under private management today in rooms 205, 207 and 208 Old South building.

ALLEGED SLAYER PUT ON TRIAL

Confessed Slayer of Patrolman Clancey Arraigned in Suffolk Superior Court

The first jurymen chosen were:

George Allen, Jr., a sexton, of No. 120 Charles street.

George A. Amory, a sailmaker, of No. 202 Atlantic avenue.

John T. Meehan, a plumber, of No. 54 Newport street.

James F. Briggs, a real estate dealer, of No. 64 Oak Island street, Revere.

John J. O'Connell, shipper, No. 45 Garden street.

District Attorney Pelletier is prosecuting the case in person, while Attorney T. J. Grady appears for the defence.

Long before the hour set for the beginning of the trial there was a clamorous crowd outside the doors of the courtroom, but mere onlookers were refused admission until the jury had been chosen. The prisoner made a good appearance as he was brought to the bar, being apparently impressed with the seriousness of his predicament, but showing neither nervousness nor weakness.

Of the jurors selected, two were excused by the court because of objections to capital punishment, and John Mehegin of No. 11 Knowlton street, Dorchester, was excused because he was an expoliceman. The others were challenged, both sides using this prerogative sparingly.

Clancey was slain in Roughan's Hall, Charlestown, while performing his duty, January 27. He joined the force December 3, and his wife, whom he married while on leave from the trenches, was about to leave England with their three-year-old child to live with her husband when a bullet snuffed out his life.

Coincident with the arraignment of Sammarco in court it is expected that the slain patrolman's widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Butterworth Clancey, will arrive in New York on the steamer Carmania and come direct to Boston.

Ex-Emperor Charles Virtually Prisoner

By International News Service.

Geneva, March 1.—Former Emperor Charles of Austria, who has been living in the Villa Prangins on Lake Geneva since his flight from Vienna, is kept practically a prisoner by his entourage.

All letters addressed to the ex-ruler are read by a member of the staff that surrounds him. He is beginning to complain that some of his closest friends who call at the villa, are sent away by the armed guards. When Charles goes out in public he is closely guarded.

COURT FINDS FOR CHAMBER

Full Bench Decides Against Certificate Holding Members of Commerce Organization

The case of Albert K. Tapper and other certificate holding members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, seeking to restrain the officers of the Chamber from purchasing outstanding certificates, was decided by the full bench of the Massachusetts Supreme Court today in favor of the Chamber officials.

The certificates are, in effect, shares in the property owned by the Chamber, but also give the holders trading rights on the floor of the grain exchange maintained by the Chamber. The complainants alleged that the Chamber officials were pursuing a course in purchasing the certificates that would wrest the property away from its rightful owners.

The court held that the plaintiffs' bill of complaints did not show that any of their vested rights had been impaired. The decision is a reversal of a decision rendered by a master, who heard the evidence in the complaint.

The property in question consists of land and a building at the junction of Milk and India streets, Boston, which was owner, before the reorganization of the Chamber in 1909, by a limited number of members of the old Chamber. The assessed value is $600,000. These members allege that the officers of the new Chamber have not kept their agreement made at the time of the reorganization.

of Charlestown has been discharged, and no finding has been announced in the case of Patrolman Charles F. Barrick, who was special officer at Charlestown at the time of the strike and who did not leave his post until after three days of the strike had elapsed.

The trial board in its finding recommended that McDonald and Dunham be sentenced to serve 240 hours of punishment duty. In the general order promulgated by Commissioner Curtis this punishment duty was suspended. McDonald was transferred from the Back Bay to Hanover street and Dunham from City Point, South Boston, to Roslindale.

By restoring these men to their former positions a peculiar situation has been created. The Civil Service Commission has announced that striking policemen are not eligible to take examinations for positions on the Boston, State or Metropolitan police departments. In effect the commission has ruled that these men were deserters and that their positions are no longer open to them, and that civil service rules do not protect them.

EAST BOSTON YOUNG MAN IS FOUND DEAD

Joseph McDonough, Jr., twenty-one, of No. 9 Havre street, East Boston, was found dead in a room of the Middlebrooks Wool Combing Company, No. 219 Border street, East Boston, where he had been employed, by Joseph Campbell, another employe. Dr. J. T. Taylor said death was due to natural causes.

COST OF LIVING IS $5 A MONTH IN CRIMEA

Paris, March 1.—For about $5 a month one can live fairly well in Crimea. Just now, because of the free deportation of the Russian noble, according to refugees arriving here. Before the war the ruble was worth about 50 cents. Now $5 buys 5,000 rubles. Sailors from the allied battleships who put in at Crimean ports practically cleaned the country of diamonds, buying them at ridiculously low prices from stranded persons.

BOHEMIAN IS IN DISTRESS

Liner From Boston Goes Ashore on Cape Sambro, Near Halifax, N. S.

Hampton Roads having been in trouble in January and towed into the Azores.

ASHORE IN SNOWSTORM.

According to a wireless report, the Bohemian was picking her way along the Nova Scotia coast last night in a very thick snowstorm. Conditions were so bad that the navigators could see but a few feet ahead.

Suddenly there was a grating, followed by a series of bumps, and the big liner was firmly around. It was found that the particular spot was on Cape Sambro, about twenty miles south of Halifax.

Captain Illsoce reports that the steamer is in a very easy position. He holds no immediate fears unless there comes a bad wind. Cape Sambro is in a particularly exposed position and in the face of a gale a ship ashore would suffer.

HAS 64 PASSENGERS.

Tugs and steamers from Halifax are speeding to the aid of the Bohemian. Captain Illsoce in one message stated he hoped to float his ship with the aid of these craft and high tide.

The Bohemian cleared Boston for Liverpool Saturday With but a portion of her intended cargo aboard. The balance of it had been delayed by the traffic tieup.

The Bohemian carried sixty-four passengers, among them Colonel Francis T. S. Hamilton, a well-known apple exporter; Rev. and Mrs. John W. Starie of Marion, and the following Bostonians: Mrs. Minnie Aspinwall, William L. Bancroft, L. J. Brown, Mrs. John F. Brown, Fred J. Conroy, Miss Ethel J. Price, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, W. R. Rogers and C. A. Walsh.

The complete passenger list follows:

REVENUE CUTTER TO AID.

The Hilton is a Bull liner, which cleared Rotterdam for Baltimore on January 27. She put into Dartmouth, Eng., on the way and took bunker coal there. Nothing was heard from her until today, when the wireless announced her peril. A revenue cutter has been sent down to locate her and take tow if possible.

Twice before this Winter the Davidson County has met with trouble. On one occasion the West Torus found her drifting helplessly and attempted to tow her into Halifax. The tow line parted, her crew made repairs and she continued on her way.

Later the West Lashaway found her with a propeller and tail shaft broken. Tow was taken and she was pulled into Fayal in the Azores. There repairs were completed and on January 24 she cleared for Newport News. Today's wireless reports her in trouble 250 miles southwest of the Azores.

Bohemian's Record in War Enviable

The Bohemian and her sister ship Winifredian are the only vessels of the Boston service of the Leyland line that survived the German submarine warfare. The losses of the fleet during the war included the Cambrian, Canadian, Devonian, Armenian and others.

Before America's entry into the war the Bohemian took thousands of horses from Boston to Liverpool for British account. When America entered the war she was converted into a troop ship and made many trips to England with American doughboys trained at Camp Devens. After the armistice she brought American soldiers back to Boston on several trips.

The Bohemian was one of the first British passenger liners to bring passengers to Boston after the war. She has accommodations for 125 cabin passengers and until two or three months ago her accommodations were booked full for every voyage. During the Winter the demand for passenger accommodations fell off and when she sailed Saturday there were only sixty-four passengers on board.

She had taken a full cargo of freight, but owing to the snow blockade a great part of it failed to arrive at the pier before she sailed. The principal items of her cargo are 85,000 bushels of wheat, taken from Boston elevators, and 1,000 bales of Egyptian cotton. These items are valued at about $1,000,000 and her general cargo is valued at as much more.

FILMY GOWNS LEAD TO COURT

Ernest Nelson Reveals Marital Troubles in His Home

stairs room, he asserted. He called his wife out. The others followed.

"NOT VERY JEALOUS."

He admitted on cross- examination that he was of a jealous disposition, but added that he was "not very jealous." The only happy period in his married life, he said, was for six months prior to the birth of their daughter, Nancy, now five and a half years old.

He told of trailing his wife in New York and said that she frequently gave him the slip. Although he gave her $250 a month, she insisted on eating in one-armed lunches in New York, he said.

He testified that J. B. Green, mentioned as correspondent in the case, is a married man with a wife and a twelve-year-old son. On December 23, 1918, he said, his wife promised him she should never see Green again. Next day he visited Green's office and found his wife and child there.

Green said, "Don't make a scene," to Nelson, he testified.

Nelson was the first witness in his suit. Mrs. Nelson is now married a counter suit, charging infidelity and cruel and abusive treatment.

Nelson testified they were married in 1912, and lived in Malden and Winchester.

Q.—Where do you now live? A.—No. 25 Audubon road.

Q.—Have you ever met Green? A.—I first saw him on the beach at Marblehead Neck in the Summer of 1917. I did not know him at that time, but had heard about him from my wife.

OPENED WIFE'S LETTER.

Witness said that October 2, 1917, a special delivery letter came to his home. He opened it, not noticing that it was addressed to his wife.

Q.—What was the letter? A.—A love letter beginning "Dearest Eve."

Witness said he guarded the letter, but some time later his wife told him she had destroyed it. It was signed "J. B. G."

He identified a telegram which came on that day. It read: "Nothing like Winchester, Mass. Regret letter extravagant. Will you grant indulgence until you get my letter explaining?"

The telegram was addressed to his wife and was from Green, witness said.

IDENTIFIES LETTER.

He identified an undated letter headed, "Yale Club, New York," which came shortly after. The letter follows:

Dear Eve: It required considerable courage to write you in explanation of the letter which you must have received from me last Saturday. I wired you yesterday requesting that you hold criticism until you received this. It is evident that we are the innocent victims of some malicious persons in this town, who are trying to start trouble in our respective families. I can think of two who could, but am loath to believe they would stoop so low.

I attended a theater party last Friday and was induced to take some wine, something I have never done before, being a total abstainer. I lost control of my senses and went to my room, and while still quite stupid received a letter requesting me to come to Boston and signed it.

As it came from Winchester, I was crazy enough to assume you sent it. I hastened into my rattled brain that somebody would wonder what led me to put down things as I suppose things that had no justification. That I have unwillingly involved you, Mrs. Nelson, and dear Nancy, distresses me beyond words, and it has completely unnerved and unfitted me for my new work.

Please be kind enough to try to believe what I have said, for my deplorable action, and believe that I am sorry. I want you to know that I hold you, your husband, and Nancy in great respect and regard. I have not an opinion may be based on an unfortunate occurrence. It is unnecessary for you to reply to this, as I feel sure you will try to forget it. Be careful of some so-called friends, as it is evident somebody is jealous, crazy or malicious.

SUGGESTED MEETING.

Witness said that the love letter which came addressed to his wife by special delivery from Green, and which he opened through a slip of himself, suggested that Green and Mrs. Nelson meet at Springfield and motor to Boston.

Mrs. Nelson, he testified, received two days later, the telegram which was offered in evidence. She went to New York on the 10 a. m. train, after receiving the message, and returned on the midnight, the witness said.

The witness said that his wife handed him a communication from Green which read as follows:

Did the little note surprise you? I didn't realize how much I cared until I found you had gone away. Do you come to Boston week-ends, and do you wish to see me if I can arrange it? I love you very much.

MRS. HEARST URGES RENEWED LOYALTY TO AMERICAN PRINCIPLES

COLBY IN PATRIOTIC PLEA

New Secretary of State and Gen. Pershing Also Stir Big New York Meeting

By Universal Service.

New York, March 1.—New Yorkers jammed the aldermanic chamber and the white room at the City Hall in what was the final event of the observation of loyalty week here. The aldermanic chamber and the white room had never before been thrown open to the public.

General Pershing, the guest of honor, was cheered when he made his appearance.

Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, chairman of the mayor's committee of women, opened the meeting. She outlined Mayor Hylan's proclamation setting aside the week.

Mrs. Hearst said:

MRS. HEARST'S ADDRESS.

"Mayor Hylan has set aside this week as loyalty week for us to express our devotion to our country.

"If we are to do this understandingly we must express our loyalty, not only to the land of our citizenship, but to the American principles and ideals and institutions, which have made this country the greatest in the world and our people the most happy and the most prosperous.

"We must reassert our loyalty to our Declaration of Independence—that wonderful document which proclaimed our freedom and gave the hope and inspiration of freedom to all the world.

"We must reassert our loyalty to our American Constitution and to the popular rights and liberties which it guarantees.

REVERENCE FOR GREAT MEN.

"We must declare our reverence for our great men from Washington to Lincoln, and our respect for the example in words and deeds which they have set for us to follow. We must realize that the proof of their wisdom is the success of our nation, and that the principles and policies which have guided this country safely and successfully in the past will continue to guide it safely and successfully as long as we are loyal to them."

Mrs. Hearst then introduced Miss Elisabeth Marbury, permanent chairman of the meeting.

Miss Marbury declared that the citizen's first duty was loyalty to the government of his community. She was warmly applauded.

NEW SECRETARY OF STATE TALKS

Bainbridge Colby, newly appointed Secretary of State, was given a warm reception when he entered the room.

The audience lost no time in demanding a speech from Mr. Colby.

Proclaiming that the American's foremost duty to his country was in the loyal support of the man in public office, Secretary Colby vigorously upheld those in charge of the government's affairs. He pointed out that unless the man in public office were found lacking he had a right to expect the unbounded support of the people, for, "indeed, it is because of the people that he was put in office."

When Mr. Colby finished it was a signal for the crowd to rise and again applaud him.

A community song leader then faced the audience. No sooner had the song got under way than a writer went about that General Pershing had arrived and was outside chatting with friends.

Pushing his way through the crowded aisles to the platform, the General turned to the audience, which was still applauding.

General Pershing made a brief address. He told of the loyalty expected of every American, and impressed on his hearers the necessity of constant patriotism.

When he had finished the General addressed the overflow meeting in the white room.

ELECTIONS IN 67 TOWNS

Licensing of Saloons Arouses Keenest Interest Among the Voters

Prohibition protests, daylight saving and war measures were features of sixty-seven town elections held in Massachusetts today. Two or three towns will decide whether they will admit moving pictures.

Of all the questions, that on liquor licenses aroused the keenest interest. White ribboners declared that they were making no organized fight on the issue, "Shall intoxicating liquors be sold," as they contend that the license vote will amount to nothing more than an expression of opinion of some of the voters. In a few towns the selectmen left the license question off the warrants.

Concord will vote on daylight saving and the proposed discontinuance of electric generation at the municipal plant. Acton citizens will vote on an appropriation for a war memorial.

Snow-blocked roads failed to bring a postponement of any of the elections. In many places pungs and cutters were sent out to transport the voters residing considerable distances from the election points.

At Arlington eight candidates sought four town offices and the contests brought out a good vote. The outcome of the license was watched with interest as Arlington has long been listed in the dry column.

At Watertown a budget of $1,227,-912 was submitted for the approval of the voters. It was the largest in the town's history. Six candidates sought a position on the Board of Selectmen and three were running for the School Board.

At Acton the election centred in the proposed war memorial. Most of the town officials were unopposed for re-election. Dinner was served at noon by the Acton Grange, Patrons of Husbandry.

At Bedford a contest for the three-year term on the Board of Selectmen and the license vote were the chief attractions. David C. Butler was opposed by George F. Lovejoy for selectman.

Palmer Denies He's After Presidency

Philadelphia, March 1.—The presidency of the United States has no lure for Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer. He made this clear in the first public statement he has made regarding the subject since he was first talked of as a possible candidate.

"My ambition was satisfied when I became attorney-general," said Mr. Palmer. "I have positively no presidential aspirations."

DENIES MURDER CONFESSION

Springfield Youth Claims He Did Not Admit Killing 12-Year-Old Walker Girl

Springfield, March 1. — Philip M. Taylor, aged twenty six, son of a prominent local business man, today denied confessing to the murder of twelve-year-old Virginia Walker, who was strangled to death following a criminal attack upon her in this city, the night of February 20.

Taylor was escorted to the police court early today under heavy guard and was arraigned on the charge of murder. He was represented by Attorney Wilmore R. Stone, who stated before court that he has engaged a corps of assistants to fight the case to a finish, regardless of the cost.

A plea of not guilty was entered by his attorney, and the case was continued to March 17.

Relatives denied the accusation that young Taylor was in the vicinity of the Somers creamery plant where the mutilated body of the girl was found.

F. H. Taylor, father of the accused, believes his son was induced to sign a false confession. If the police have any such document in their possession. He stated that his son was at one time in the Northampton Asylum and was manifestly unbalanced.

March Brings Promise of Colder Weather

New England weather, which can be depended on only to be contrary, lived up to its reputation today by ushering in a March which could be characterized as neither lamblike nor lionlike.

To be sure, wren, as some poets would say, dewy dusted morning reigned lightly over the misty mountain tops, the weather was comparatively mild, but it was far from that balmy state generally known as lamblike.

On the other hand it had no leonine adjuncts, but, in the belief of the weather bureau, if it isn't one thing it must be another, so colder temperatures were predicted.

The official forecast read:

"Fair tonight and Tuesday, colder tonight; moderate northwest to west winds."

Furthermore, the justly celebrated and highly esteemed weatherman stated that there was no warm weather in sight, and that usually low temperatures prevail south to the Gulf States. Below zero marks were recorded today in parts of Florida and Louisiana.

At Key West it was 56, while Nantucket, the warmest place in New England was 28. Northfield, Vt., was the coldest spot in the country, with the mercury 6 below.

MEXICAN GANG HAS ESCAPED

Pursuers Fail as Bandits Flee Into Wild Country Across Border

Nogales, Ariz., March 1.—Mexican bandits under Ezequiel Lara, who last Friday raided the Arivaca, Ariz., postoffice, murdering Alexander Frasier and fatally wounding his brother, appear to have vanished into the wild country south of the border.

Public indignation is running high here. The death today of John Frasier, who with his brother was popular in this section, may precipitate violence towards the populace of Nogales, Mexico, separated from the American town by only an invisible line.

Withdrawal of Sheriff Earhart's posse from the pursuit below the border, where Lara's trail grew "cold," and the return of the second posse which went in search of Earhart's men, leaves the bandits unpursued and free to make good their escape.

Montana camp, where Earhart withdrew with his men, has been isolated, telephone and telegraph wires having been cut by Lara's bandits, it is said.

Troop A of the Tenth Cavalry has authority with all other American border patrols only to take up pursuit on "hot" trails of marauding Mexican bands. This is far no such but trail has been found, although troopers have been scouring the country for a lead that would take them into Mexico.

John Frasier's story on his deathbed is that he and his brother were shot down "without a dog's chance." Lara entered with his band, ordered "hands up" and opened a fusillade without warning.

Slayer of Former Consul Publicly Paid Penalty

Washington, March 1.—The Mexican bandit who murdered August Morrill, the aged former American consul, near Magassnillo, is believed to have suffered death as a penalty, the State Department was advised today. A notorious bandit, named Cacheton, was found hanged near the scene of Morrill's slaying. State Department advises say that he probably was hanged by order of Civilano Corona, leader of the bandits in Coloma. Cacheton is believed to have killed Morrill.

Assurances have been received from Mexican federal officials assuring the border that every effort will be made to get the bandits who shot up the general store and postoffice of Frasier brothers at Ruby, Ariz.

CUT APPROPRIATION FOR WEST POINT

Washington, March 1.—Carrying a total appropriation of $2,142,215 the annual Military Academy appropriation bill today was passed by the Senate. The bill carries $130,000 less than the appropriation last year, $2,300 more than as passed by the House and $4,500,000 less than recommended by the War Department.

U. S. TUG DREADNOUGHT IN DISTRESS IN PACIFIC

RAP CAMBRIDGE 'L' SERVICE

Protestants Are Promised Better Conditions by Officials of Road

A protest against the extremely poor transportation service of the Boston Elevated, claimed by representatives from various Cambridge districts, was made today in Mayor Quincy's office in the City Hall before officials of the Elevated, including Manager Edward Dana, Superintendent of Transportation Smith and Division Superintendent Harrington.

The committee from the Cambridge localities included Councillors Stanton, Mullett, Feeley, Lynch, Appel and President James T. Barrett.

Complaints from sections where conditions are notably bad were brought to the attention of the board. The service at the Harvard square subway, on Broadway, Huron avenue and the viaduct line were characterized as "intolerable" by Mayor Quinn. Other reports from sections where frequent delays have occurred and where facilities have been entirely inadequate were made to the officials.

As a result of the conference, Manager Dana announced that a new schedule will be prepared, to go into effect in a few days, which will greatly improve the transportation conditions for Cambridge people and relieve the congestion of the past months.

GEORGE WASHINGTON AT NAVY YARD FOR REPAIRS

The George Washington, transport that took President Wilson to and from Europe, arrived at the Charlestown Navy Yard today for extensive repairs. This is the biggest job ever given to the local navy yard, and there was great rejoicing among the workmen there, particularly because many of them have lately been laid off for lack of work. Thanks to William Randolph Hearst the American was voiced by the men, because, but for the ship bulletin campaign waged by the Hearst papers, they said, this work would never have come to them. Otherwise the ship would have been sold to the International Mercantile Marine for a fraction of its real value. It has been learned, though not officially, that repairs to be made on the George Washington will aggregate $3,000,000.

CONFERENCES ON THE NEW WORLD MOVEMENT

After the meetings preceding the campaigners will prepare for the financial campaign for $14,000,000 which will be conducted simultaneously with the Interchurch World Movement campaign from April 25 to May 2.

Charge Girl of 11 Was Sold to Chinaman

Binghamton, N. Y., March 1.—Investigation is being made here of the marriage of Anna Lee Nong, the eleven-year-old child wife of David Lee Nong, Chinese chop suey resort proprietor, of Binghamton.

The girl has been returned to this city after, it is declared, she was found wandering about the streets in lower New York city by a representative of the Travelers' Aid Society.

The latest step in the case came with the arrest of Mrs. Marie Chin Wore at her home on Chenango street on a charge of abduction. It is alleged that the woman posed as the mother of the Chinaman's child wife, and intimations have been made that the authorities have obtained evidence that Mrs. Wore sold the little girl to the Celestial for $700 on the authorities say. She was thirty-four years old and of English parentage. She gave her occupation as a nurse.

daughter of Mrs. Wore.

Anna Lee Nong was brought back by Miss Mary E. Banta, Chinese missionary. The girl was taken to the community service house, where an investigation of her story was begun. This was followed shortly afterward by the arrest of Mrs. Wore. She pleaded not guilty.

The Binghamton authorities are said to have in their possession a statement made by David Lee Nong to the effect that he paid about $700 to Mrs. Wore for his wife. Mrs. Wore told the authorities that she was thirty-four years old and of English parentage. She gave her occupation as a nurse.

CHARGE 'SYSTEM' AIDS SUSPECT

Harry Allen, 35, Alleged Pickpocket, Bailed on Boston Warrant at Providence

Providence, March 1.—Harry Allen, thirty-five, charged with being a pickpocket, thwarted efforts of Boston and local police to keep him in jail until the time for his trial when they served a fugitive from justice warrant for the Boston authorities on him. Allen is said by the police to be backed by a "system" which guarantees suspects from humiliation or police annoyance.

According to Chief Inspector John F. Maguire Allen was arrested here in 1917 and quickly furnished bail. The amount of bail is said to be no secret. Nothing more was heard of Allen, who made a get-a-way without court trial, until the New York police wired that Allen was "detained" in that city. Allen was brought to this city and charged with larceny from the person and sent to prison to await developments. Anastasia Parker accompanied attorneys to the court and furnished $2,000 to guarantee his appearance.

Fearing that Allen would again decamp, Chief Maguire brought forth the Boston fugitive warrant and had it served at the prison. Judge E. W. Blodgett of Superior Court set bail at $2,500 on the Boston fugitive case. This was also quickly provided by Attorneys Parker and George Harris, and Allen calmly walked out of the court. His trial is scheduled for March 12.

MORE DEATHS AT LONG ISLAND

Fifteen of the Influenza Victims, Bodies Unclaimed, Go to Paupers' Graves

Three deaths in the past forty-eight hours have increased the total of influenza victims at Long Island hospital to forty-three, according to a statement by Penal Institutions Commissioner Thomas C. O'Brien today. There are still forty-three persons ill, including one pupil nurse who is in a serious condition from pneumonia.

The situation is more hopeful today than at any time since the epidemic began, Mr. O'Brien said, and no further deaths are expected by the physicians. Fifteen patients were discharged today.

The high death rate in the 119 cases which developed is ascribed to the fact that the victims were old, the average age being seventy, and their resistance was greatly lowered by other diseases for which they were undergoing treatment.

Fifteen of the victims, whose bodies were unclaimed by relatives, were buried today in paupers' graves in Long Island cemetery. To make a path to the burial ground, prisoners from Dear Island had to shovel through drifts from ten to fifteen feet high, and according to nearly a mile from the hospital to the cemetery. Services were conducted by Rev. Father Quigley and Rev. George E. Stokes.

To Teach Sex to Vote Minus Hairpin's Aid

By International News Service.

Washington, March 1.—Don't write "Yours truly, Maudie Jones" on your ballot after you have marked it.

If you have dropped it into the ballot box don't ask for it back, suddenly remembering you voted for that awful Mr. Smith when you meant to vote for that nice Alfred Knox.

Don't complain because the voting booth isn't fitted with a mirror or hairpins or anything or there is not even a chair to sit on.

Don't call the hubby or father in the next booth to ask wrether you should vote for all the presidential candidates or just two. It's not allowed and you can't tell how ready the officials really are to help you.

These "don'ts" and other things women voters ought to know will be taught in training schools to be established in the new suffrage States for the enlightenment of those of the fair sex ignorant of the arts and tricks of the political game.

The schools will be in operation shortly, Mrs. Maud Wood Park, chairman of the National League of Women Voters, announced today.

Under the direction of Mrs. George Gellhorn of St. Louis politically experienced women from the older suffrage States will be sent out by the league to take charge. Later training schools for lobbyists may be established, it is said, to secure avaliable for the work of getting legislation through Congress for the protection of women and children.

TO BOOST PRICE OF HARD COAL

Expected Advance in Miners' Wages Will Be Passed on to the Consumer

New York, March 1.—An increase in the cost of anthracite to the consumers was forecast today in a statement issued by Charles S. Allen, secretary of the Wholesale Coal Trade Association.

"The wage agreement with the anthracite miners expires on March 31," said Mr. Allen. "It is likely that the miners will demand a big increase for increased wages and the government, in all probability, will intervene and grant them substantially what they ask.

"In view of the present narrow margin on which the coal business is being conducted, it, like every other business, will be compelled to pass these increases on to the consumer."

MILK STAYS AT 10 CENTS FOR BIG PRODUCERS

Plainfield, Ct., March 1.—Milk producers in Eastern Connecticut who supply a part of the Boston and Providence market will continue to receive 10 cents a quart for milk, although, according to an agreement made with the milk distributors last Fall, there was to have been a reduction March 1. The shortage of milk and the high price of production is given as the reason for continuing the present price of 10 cents.

PUTS EXPERTS IN OUIJA CLASS

At Burke Trial, Attorney Says They "Look Through a Retainer"

Skowhegan, Me., March 1.—Testimony of handwriting experts on both sides was criticized by Attorney William R. Pattangall today in his argument for the defence before the jury trying John A. Burke on the charge of killing Nelson W. Bartley. He said that evidence supplied by them was of no more value than the "wanderings" of a palmist or a ouija board.

He charged the State's case was full of "fraud and plot" and declared that the motive and plot, as carried out according to the prosecution, was worthy only of an insane person.

Commenting on the evidence of the handwriting experts, two of whom testified for the government and two for the defence, he declared that no handwriting expert in the world can prove anything beyond a reasonable doubt.

"They appear to have looked at the signatures inverted in this case through a microscope," he added.

The State's argument was presented to the jury by Attorney General Guy Sturgis.

ALLEGE PLOT TO BOOST BREAD

Wheat Speculators' Billion-Dollar Deal Bared by Inquiry, Is Charge

Spokane grand jury for a blanket investigation it now appears ready to conduct an inquiry for the pleas of Houser and Barnes. This inquiry, being conducted at Portland, Ore., appears to be an investigation of the grand jury which had urged an investigation of the alleged manipulations in wheat.

Involved in the case, as pointed out in the presentment, is the propaganda of Barnes and Herbert Hoover as appearing in their newly acquired newspaper in Washington, to "boost" the plan to finance wheat and flour to foreign countries on a large scale.

The Hoover-Barnes propaganda and the "rush" with which Barnes and Houser stirred up the "investigation" of the grand jury is interpreted by men of high office to mean that the "handwriting on the wall" has been seen and feared.

It is maintained that the nation-wide scheme alleged will not be realized unless the speculators are successful in inducing Congress to use $150,000,000 of the appropriation to take the wheat which they have cornered off their hands.

It is the above appropriation that Hoover and Barnes are urging in their newspaper.

Faced by the coming expiration of the government's minimum price guaranty, and the probable subsequent recall by the banks of the millions which they have loaned on warehouse receipts, it is claimed, these speculators now see ruin impending.

The Spokane grand jury states that in manipulating wheat the speculators increased the price from the $2.20 paid the farmer to $3.50, the price exacted from the mills.

An effort to obtain a copy of the presentment from the Department of Justice resulted in the statement that it was not the custom to give out grand jury reports. A copy of the report was obtained by the American, however, from a member of the United States Senate. He received it in the mail from a man in Washington.

When the substance of the presentment was first made known, Mr. Houser wired Attorney-General Palmer that the statements made against him in it were false and asked for a complete investigation.

Julius H. Barnes, head of the Grain Corporation, also got into touch with Attorney-General Palmer personally.

Mr. Houser contended, it is said, was that a grave charge has been made against a man connected with the Grain Corporation and that an inquiry was necessary to determine whether the charges were true. If it were true, Mr. Barnes is reported to have told the attorney-general, Mr. Houser should be indicted; if untrue, his name should be cleared.

Shortly after Mr. Barnes' conversation with the attorney-general, the latter ordered the new investigation.

The action of the Spokane Grand Jury has had the effect, in some measure, of preventing action in the House on the European food relief bill, which carries an appropriation of $150,000,000 to enable the United States Grain Corporation to supply food to the people of Poland, Austria and Armenia.

WEYMOUTH DEALERS OUT OF STOVE COAL

The work of digging Weymouth out of the huge snowdrifts continued through Saturday and Sunday. The town appealed to the citizens to help out on Sunday, and as a result more than a hundred men and boys reported for work. Coal dealers have completely exhausted their supply of stove coal and they have only enough hay and grain to last through the week.

Germany Is About to Parley With Lenine

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Boston American Staff Correspondent.

Special Cable Dispatch.

Berlin, March 1.—Despite the fear prevailing in German official circles that peace with Soviet Russia might result to a flood of Bolshevist propaganda which, owing to the unsettled political conditions in Germany, would fall upon all too fertile ground, the conviction is gaining ground that negotiations with the Lenine government are inevitable.

With the Anglo-Russian conferences at Copenhagen as a precedent, informal conversations are expected to be entered into shortly, with the ultimate object of reopening diplomatic negotiations. Discussion of the question of exchanging prisoners is the immediate pretext. About 20,000 German prisoners are still held near Petrograd and Moscow, while there are still 15,000 Russian prisoners in Germany.

Speculators Aided by Hoover, Says Jury

Spokane, Wash., March 1.—The Federal Grand Jury which recently ended its sessions here has made a scathing report to the United States Department of Justice expressing belief that wheat speculators have used the credit of the United States government to corner the great bulk of its stupendous 1919 wheat crop; that through their manipulations the price of wheat, and consequently the price of bread, has been increased 50 per cent.

Officials high in the United States Grain Corporation, organized by the government to protect its citizens against just such manipulation, are mentioned in the report. At least one of them is accused of manipulating grain on a gigantic scale and reaping immense profits to himself.

Declaring that the government can reduce the price of flour and retail necessities whenever it so elects, the Grand Jury demands an immediate investigation into all grain centres in the United States. The report follows:

"When the government appropriated $1,000,000,000 to buy the 1919 wheat crop, wheat receipts became as good as cash warehouse bonds. Banks were glad to loan money in any quantity to purchase wheat, for the money paid the farmer was immediately redeposited in the banks.

"The minimum price of wheat was fixed in the Northwest at $2.20 for soft wheat and $2.22 for hard wheat, contract points, and the prices paid the farmers were these sums less freight to coast points, averaging about 13 cents per bushel, and various other charges which amounted to from 4 to 6 cents per bushel. In some cases a small premium was paid for hard wheat.

"The majority of the mills in the Northwest are owned by a half dozen concerns, and each in turn has a grain department. The officers and operated by the men who own the milling concerns.

88 PER CENT. OF CROP CORNERED.

"From a great mass of testimony presented before the Grand Jury, we believe that 85 per cent. of the 1919 wheat crop of this State, estimated at 42,000,000 bushels, went into the hands of these half-dozen grain companies and was purchased prior to October 31, before any material advance in price.

"The banks of this State are honeycombed with warehouse receipts. Spokane banks at one time were carrying $9,000,000 worth of warehouse receipts, and it is not unusual to find that a small country bank has loaned $1,000,000 on wheat receipts.

"These companies practically all of the wheat in the States of Oregon and Washington. These companies have been able to advance the price by sales to each other and enough manipulations of the grain market centred at Minneapolis and by other methods.

HOW PRICE WAS BOOSTED.

"Although the greater part of the wheat was purchased around $2.07, the grain companies are selling the wheat to their own milling concerns at the prevailing market price, which at present is from $3 to $3.30 per bushel for hard wheat. Their own mills are assessing the rigid to manufacture flour on the basis of the price paid for the wheat—a price which is the result of their own acts of manipulation.

"The by-products of flour, bran and shorts, are a necessary food for dairy cattle, and the prices now demanded for these by-products mean destruction of the dairy industry.

"Under regulations existing in 1918, millers were prohibited from making more than 50 cents a ton on mill feeds, and a 'fair' price on carload lots was fixed by the United States Food Administrator at $28.75 per ton, while today mill feeds are selling in Spokane at $43 per ton, carload lots, and $50 at coast points.

"The Pacific Grain Company, the successor of the M. H. Houser Grain Company, the Pacific Coast Elevator Company and the Puget Sound Warehouse & Elevator Company are owned and operated in connection with the Portland Flour Mills concern, with headquarters at Portland, Oregon.

BELIEVES HOUSER MANIPULATOR

"There corporations were owned by M. H. Houser, vice-president of the United States Grain Corporation for the Northwest district. At the time he became vice-president he made some kind of a transfer of his interests in these concerns, and does not at this time appear as the owner.

"The offices of the United States Grain Corporation for the Northwestern district and the offices of the above named being located in a building owned by M. H. Houser in Portland, Oregon, it is, by reason thereof, the belief of the Grand Jurors that he, Houser, is the real party in interest in the milling and grain concerns above named, and that by reason of his connection with the United States Grain Corporation he has been able to manipulate and operate them to an immense profit to himself and associates.

"The Pacific Grain Company admits having bought 11,000,000 bushels of the 1919 wheat crop.

"It is impossible for this district to obtain relief, for the grain companies threaten, in case action is taken to force them to sell the grain to the mills at the price paid by them plus a reasonable carrying charge, to close the mills and ship the grain to eastern points.

ASKS ACTION ALL OVER U. S.

"To frustrate any concerted plan of evasion, we would urge that the Department of Justice take simultaneous action in all wheat and flour centres of the United States.

"Lately the press reported that Julius Barnes, president of the United States Grain Corporation, had joined with Herbert Hoover in the purchase of one of the large newspapers of Washington, D. C. We now note daily newspaper articles which seem to indicate a propaganda is being carried on through the newspaper by Mr. Hoover, urging the financing on a huge scale of flour and wheat to foreign countries.

"According to press reports, former Secretary of Treasury Glass recommended to Congress the appropriation of $150,000,000 to purchase flour and wheat. It is our belief that that this wheat is now owned largely by speculators and, in some cases, by concerns directly and indirectly connected with some of the officers of the United States Grain Corporation. Sales to Europe will benefit only the purse of individuals and the consumer will pay the bills.

GOVERNMENT CREDIT USED.

"We believe the credit of this government, through the national and Federal Reserve banks has been used by wheat speculators to carry the great bulk of the 1919 wheat crop, and that it is within the power of the government to reduce the price of flour and related necessities whenever it chooses to.

"Under Section 3 of the act, approved March 4, 1913, commonly known as the Wheat Guaranty Act, the President of the United States is given the power by proclamation to find what is a fair, just or reasonable practice, device, rate, commission, charge, profit or price. And we would recommend that a proclamation be issued under said act fixing a selling price of all wheat now held in the United States at the price paid the farmers, plus a reasonable carrying charge, said fixed price not to apply to the producer, and that similar price be fixed on flour and mill feeds.

"We further recommend that no appropriation be made by Congress to finance the sales of wheat, flour or mill products to foreign countries until such time as the American people are relieved from paying the extortionate prices now prevailing, and the end of the present crop year, when a small country bank has loaned $1,000,000 on wheat receipts.

"October 31, before practically all of the wheat in the States of Oregon and Washington had been contracted for by these companies, and enough manipulations of the grain market centred at Minneapolis and by other methods.

"Dated this 7th day of February, 1920.

"L. ROY SLATER, Foreman.
"GEORGE W. FULLER, Secretary."

Girl Tumbles From Third Story

Fourteen-year-old Maria Risoldi of No. 487 Hanover street turned a somersault twenty-five feet from her third-floor window to the snow below and escaped with a few scratches and contusions.

It occurred while the family was at dinner. Half an hour later and all the afternoon and evening Maria lay smilingly tucked in a front room cot and joked about it.

"Why, I just went to look out the front window to see how the weather was and my hands slipped," she explained. "There was ice on the sill, which is very low, and out I went."

"We saw her coming," said the children on the lower floor. "She turned over in the air, landed on her feet on a high mound of hard snow, slid down it to the sidewalk, and neighbors picked her up and carried her in."

HINT TRUCE NEAR IN LOVE SUIT

Maine Guide Hopes to Induce Wife to Drop $40,000 Case Against N. Y. Woman

Greenville, Me., March 1.—Those who looked forward to hearing sensational evidence at the suit for $40,000 brought against Mrs. Cornelia Nelson, wealthy New Jersey woman, by Mrs. Peter Turcott of this place for alienation of the affections of the latter's handsome husband, now fear that the trial will never take place. It was scheduled for Dover, county seat of Piscataquis County, next month.

The fact that the guide arrived here almost simultaneously with his wife, and has been a not infrequent visitor to the house of Wallace Reserve, her brother-in-law, with whom she is living, leads to a general belief that every effort is being made to settle the remarkable case out of court. It is known that she is the wish of both Mr. and Mrs. Nelson, by whom Turcott was employed as a guide and chauffeur.

Turcott, a remarkably fine looking man, with the physique which comes from living out of doors, and the polished manner which comes from long association with society folk in New York and Florida, arrived here a day ahead of his wife. He greeted old neighbors cordially, and joked about the suits which his wife has filed against him for divorce and against Mrs. Nelson for alienating his affections.

Mrs. Turcott came here from Solon, where she has been working to support herself. She, too, visited her former neighbors, and discussed her cases with them, although not in any light vein.

From remarks he has made to the villagers, it is evident that Turcott believes the case will be kept out of court, and that he, having accomplished this, will return to New York shortly.

At the end of the year there were 209,860 employes in the Associated Bell companies, equaling 24,000 miles of wire. The conference will be in the Park Street Church and will continue for three days. Simultaneously, there will be women's conferences in Ford Hall.

At Frank H. Haggard, of the home mission division of the Interchurch World Movement in the United States, will preside on the opening day. Dr. Haggard was until recently pastor of the First Congregational Church in Boston, and he is credited with the statement that the meeting will be in session.

The first day's conference will be devoted with reports and surveys by officials of the Interchurch World Movement. These surveys will set forth the need for revitalization, and will be groundwork for the financial campaign the co-operating churches are asking. The pastors will meet in social gatherings, according to their divisions made within the denomination. These divisions are life interest, missionary education, social resources and stewardship.

BOND PLOT HEAD A 'LADY KILLER'

"Nicky" Arnstein Only a Tool for Super-Master Mind, Is Claim

New York, March 1.—A man known among the Broadway resorts as a "lady killer," is said by the police to be the "super-master mind" in the $5,000,000 bond theft plot.

"Nicky" Arnstein, indicted as one of the conspirators, still appears to have been only a tool in the hands of the mysterious super-criminal, who disappeared from the city recently, accompanied by his latest flame, a beautiful girl art student.

The man referred to has no criminal record, so far as known, and his picture is not to be found in the "Rogues' Gallery," but the police have a fairly accurate description of him.

He is said to have had numerous adventures with women in Europe as well as on this side of the Atlantic.

Arnstein's whereabouts is still a mystery, but it is expected that he will turn up today with his attorney, Eugene Magee, to surrender himself to the authorities. One man connected with the prosecution laughed when Arnstein was mentioned as the "master mind" in the plot. He said intimates of "Nicky" had referred to him in his presence as a "pinhead."

Assistant District Attorney Dooling intimated that Arnstein, just before he left the city, had received something like $35,000, of which he had to give a third to another man, who had been working with him.

AGAINST PLAN TO CENSOR FILMS

Congressman Dallinger Declares Bill Violates Free Press Guarantees

Congressman Frederick W. Dallinger of Cambridge, in opposing a censorship of motion pictures, declares that the history of the attempt to censor films bears a close analogy to the history of the attempt to abridge the freedom of speech and of the press.

Pointing out that the moving picture films are today one of the greatest vehicles of propaganda, Congressman Dallinger states that the attack of censors on films have been instigated by those who found their enterprise, in many cases, injured by the propaganda conveyed.

CITES OHIO CASE.

He cites the "slashing" of a film in Ohio because it depicted a manufacturer, bountiful in charities, which advertised himself, but hard on his employes, and suppressed on the ground that it tended to excite class feeling.

"This bill," said Congressman Dallinger, in speaking of his opposition to censorship at Washington, "proposes to regulate the principal amusement agency and what is becoming to be one of the chief educational agencies of the people of the United States.

"It is not proposed to censor the plays or operas produced at high-priced theatres, but it is proposed to give a commission absolute power to determine what the great mass of people shall be permitted to see depicted upon the motion picture screen.

"Before this is done the proponents of the measure should show that a wide-spread evil exists and with which the authorities are unable to cope.

"Evidence thus far produced fails to show that any significant proportion of the moving-picture films now being exhibited throughout the United States are objectionable.

BARS EVEN SCRIPTURES.

"In the last analysis it appears that what the proponents of this legislation really desire is to prevent the exhibition through the agency of the motion picture film of any book or play which in any way depicts crime or immorality, or paints the evil side of human life, on the ground that such scenes tend to corrupt morals and to incite crime. It is obvious that any such test as this would prevent the mass of American people, whose limited means would not permit them to patronize the high-priced theatres, from seeing depicted upon the motion picture screen practically all the great works of literature from the beginning of time. Judged by any such standards most of Shakespeare's plays and even many parts of the sacred Scriptures would be barred.

"We know that the original and dominating purpose of the censorship of the drama in England was distinctly political, as was demonstrated by the Parliamentary investigation of 1909.

"If we keep in mind the important fact that the vital thing in speech and press which was sought on the one hand to be restrained and trammelled, and on the other hand to be kept free, was the power of propaganda, we shall understand more clearly the importance of bringing the moving picture film within the constitutional guaranty of free speech and a free press because the analogy in principle and necessity is complete. Indeed, the history of the attempt to censor the freedom of the motion picture films bears a close analogy to the history of the attempt to abridge the freedom of speech and the freedom of the press.

VIOLATES FREE PRESS.

"In Pennsylvania the power of the censorship was used to suppress 'The Battle Cry of Peace' on the ground it tended toward a breach of neutrality and that it tended to incite military spirit.

"In Massachusetts an organization to ameliorate the conditions of child labor has been exhibiting moving pictures of actual conditions in certain plants, and the representatives of these manufacturers attempted to stop these exhibitions. If Massachusetts had a board of censors, who knows what its action would have been upon this case?

"In short, this bill violates the principles of the constitutional guaranty of free press."

BRITAIN FEARS LOSS OF SUPREMACY BY FREEING ERIN, SAYS COHALAN

CARDINAL INSISTS ENGLAND ANSWER IRISH DEMANDS

Crediting English statesmen with being the craftiest diplomats in the world and able to make people believe black is white or vice versa, Judge Daniel F. Cohalan of the New York Supreme Court declared to an audience of 500 men and women in the hall of the Notre Dame Academy in the Fenway, Back Bay, that the reason England does not wish to give up Ireland to the Irish is because these same statesmen see in such a move the end of Great Britain's supremacy of the sea.

Cardinal O'Connell occupied a seat on the floor of the hall and followed carefully everything Justice Cohalan said during his talk of an hour and a half when called upon for a speech by the Rev. Florence J. Halloran of Wakefield, chairman of the meeting, caused an outburst of enthusiasm by declaring that no one could refute the statements of the judge.

"The opponents of Irish independence cannot disprove one statement or take one exception to what Justice Cohalan said here," said Cardinal O'Connell, who insisted on speaking from the floor, where, he said, he came "to take the position with the plain people." His Eminence paid a glowing tribute to the analytical mind of Justice Cohalan as evidenced in his address.

U. S. SPRUNG FROM TYRANNY.

Justice Cohalan was frequently interrupted during his address by outbursts of applause, especially when he graphically outlined how the American form of government came into existence because of the tyranny of the English government. He gave an insight to the wonderful power of the visible and invisible government of Great Britain, saying that the power behind the visible government of that country was so great that it surpasses all human understanding, and how only this invisible government is kept alive in this country by educators who are frequently heard in schools, colleges and on public platforms telling their auditors that the American Revolution was a mistake.

Father Halloran presented Justice Cohalan to the audience with the statement that he was "the power that called into action the movement for Irish independence," and that "it came from the heart and brain of the man who is to address us."

Seated on the platform were Thomas Mahony of the Catholic Union of Boston, John Morton, Edward F. McSweeney, Martin Lomasney, Joseph Lee and Dr. Good of the latter city. Former Mayor James M. Curley of Boston sat with Cardinal O'Connell on one rear the stage. The Sisters of Notre Dame attached to the institution listened to the lecture from inside the room just off the stage.

Justice Cohalan said in part:

ENGLAND'S "SOLUTIONS."

"We hear now in one source, now in another, of propositions advanced, almost a new one every day, from some statesmen in England as to the manner in which the Irish question may be settled. One week we are called on to consider the solution offered by Lloyd George and in the next week the solution offered by Lord Cecil.

"There are only three outstanding suggestions that have been made within the last two months. But what I want to point out is that every one of these suggestions is an English proposal intended to show some way of settling this question in some manner to inure to the benefit of the English side. Not one of them is taking into account the people of Ireland or the people of America.

AMERICA DECEIVED.

"The solution of this question is, as I see, interwoven with the question generally of liberty with humanity. We have had from spokesmen for England here, and their number is legion, whether they can be descendants of the Tories whom we have had always with us, whether they be more recent arrivals, whether they be those who speak in the name of America or those who speak openly in the name of England, we have had 1,000 propositions put before us.

"But I maintain that everyone of them is intended only to make it appear to the people of America, whose opinion in the last analysis is going to be a tremendous force with the Irish question, is a tremendously complicated one; that it has at least 100 sides; that it is so bound up with English interests, with English problems, with English questions that England must be taken into account in the settlement of it. I want to point out to you that just so long as that point of view has force here in America, that just so long will we fail to understand this Irish question.

SIMPLY ASK FREEDOM.

"This question is in the last analysis simple. It is so simple that a child may understand it. This question if properly stated is one that one running may read over, for after all, all that the people of Ireland ask is that they may have their own land to govern in their own way without interference from the outside on the part of anybody and without interference with the interests of anyone outside of Ireland.

"Here we find unlike the lands that have been brought into existence since the end of the war or since the armistice was signed, a land the boundaries of which have been fixed by God Himself and not by man; here we find a country surrounded on all sides by the sea; here we find a race that has a civilization that belongs to itself, that has a language of its own, that has a literature going back for thousands of years, that has a system of laws that would bear favorable comparison with those of any other land, including those most powerful in ancient or in modern day.

PROBLEM IS SIMPLE.

"All that they ask is that which, to the fullest measure they will insist on, is that they be permitted to govern themselves in their own way on a platform of absolute religious freedom and tolerance of all within Ireland without interference in any way with the rights of others.

"What problem could be simpler? They are asking not one single inch of territory outside of Ireland. They do not want to impose their will upon one single person who lives outside the four shores of Ireland; they do not want any part or parcel in the British Empire. They want only to be let alone, to dwell in peace and harmony with all the people of the earth. They do not want to revive any old quarrels; they do not want to drive anyone out of the country no matter on what title he came in.

WILL BATTLE FOREVER.

"Upon a platform as broad as the country itself, on a form of government modelled upon ours, and no greater tribute can be paid to America—with absolute political equality before the law, with absolute religious freedom and toleration so that to Almighty God, because it indicates such a tremendous progress in the whole State of the case—today everyone who stands on the platform individually to present the case of the cause of Ireland leaves emotions aside. Since the English or the Anglo-Saxons pride themselves upon looking at matters in a purely white light of reason and of wishing by these inferences to treat the question entirely without sentiment, very well, then we present this case to you in that way without sentiment, and on that basis I defy anyone living to take exception, and I may say to disprove any one statement which Judge Cohalan made here today. It simply cannot be done.

INSISTS ON ANSWER.

"Therefore we are in the presence of this statement that is absolutely unassailable from any point of view as stated by a man of the highest moral character, also unassailable from any point of view, a man who personally has nothing to gain no matter how the question is finally decided, the man who before all his fellow citizens came and spoke as he spoke, he is under the constant judgment of all, and yet who presents a case, and the only thing we want is simply an honest, straight answer and that answer as yet has not come.

"We get evasions, as the judge said, from this statement and that. We get a coloring of the question, but never the direct answer. But we have now arrived at the point where we are insisting upon a direct answer, and we can and we shall take no other. Either they must simply state 'we never intend to do this, which is clearly just, on the contrary we intend to hold by might of force against right the possession of this Ireland, this nation, which by no right except by the force of might has come into our possession.'

IS AN AMERICAN QUESTION.

"Either that or admit that Justice Cohalan is right, that the Irish question is a question not of Ireland only, certainly not of England only, but, I hold, of all mankind, because it is a question of justice and, I also hold, especially an American question. It is a question, above all, in which Americans as Americans must be doubly interested and on the side which has been presented here today. We need now to repeat the arguments that were stated so clearly, so limpidly, so irrefutably that no one—no one—can answer except in one way: Either America and Americans are to play the game of hypocrisy which the British government has continued to play until this day, or else it must come out straightforwardly and say: 'We want to war for right and justice; we must insist logically and in consciences upon the liberty, the independence of the Irish nation.'"

Letters of Poetess Reveal "Communications From the Spirit World"

(The following hitherto unpublished letters from America's greatest poetess to her favorite brother, Marcus P. Wheeler, Windsor, Wis., a Civil War veteran, constitute a remarkable human document. At one and the same time they set forth what she believed her certain knowledge of the life hereafter, based upon communications from her husband, Robert M. Wilcox, who died in 1916, and also very interesting sidelights on the daily life and views of this writer whose name is known to everyone who reads. These letters will be printed in daily instalments.)

Dijon, March 29, 1918.

Dear Marcus:

Your letter of March 11th got her today—very quick time. Most letters are over a month on the way.

The photographs of the portraits, I grieve to say, I had neglected to have taken. I have now written Mrs. Ritter to attend to it at once. My last weeks in America were very confusing and difficult. My book, the publishers, my health and the ray doctors, the weather, my voyage and the passport agency, enormous mails, the packing, countless interruptions—all made me forget some things.

I came here after just a month in Paris. I did not think of leaving Paris, despite the air raids and bombardment, but imperative messages came from Robert for me to come here for eighteen days. So I came. Every one said I could not get away from Paris under a week or ten days—so much red tape to go through for travel, and so much travel now.

But the ways all opened for us, like the passage over the Red Sea. So here I am—doing all kinds of things to be helpful. Am going to visit wounded soldiers this p. m. for the first time. I recited a poem to a crowd of soldiers yesterday. Mrs. Randall is to read to them tonight from my poems. We had "mess" with the officers yesterday and stood in line with our tin dishes. We "mess" with the soldiers next week.

NEW PHASES OF LIFE.

Life is certainly showing new phases to me each year. Last Easter I went at 5 a. m. to the top of Hollywood mountain to a Theosophical Easter service. This year I expect to go to the wonderful old church here, which has about 100 gargoyles carved on it to keep evil spirits away. I know its walls are soaked in delightful old superstitions and will vibrate with interest. One Easter I spent in Sicily; one in India.

I must say good-by. I could write a letter of vivid interest to you, but the censor would not let it pass.

ELLA.

Somewhere in France,

Dear Marcus:

I thought you would enjoy this parody on one of Kipling's most famous verses. If you haven't read "Danny Din," by Kipling, go to some library and read it, so you can enjoy this delightful parody (the well-known verse describing an automobile under the name "Hunka Tin." I don't know who wrote it.

TELLS OF HEROES.

Yesterday Mrs. Randall and I were at the hospital and talked with three American lads under twenty-two who have been given the Cross of Honor for bravery at the front. One, nineteen, carried a wounded comrade back from the firing line and was himself wounded—a shelled leg, but he will not lose it—besides the nurses there are few here. I wrote to this boy's mother last night, much to his joy, and to another boy's sweetheart.

In one ward we saw many boys who have fallen ill or been hurt by accidents while doing the duties of war away from the front. Many of them will never be able to go to the front, and feel despondent over it. I wrote verses for them.

The hospital nurses are very grateful for our assistance in entertaining the boys in their wards, and the boys greet us with enthusiasm. So do those in the Y. M. C. A. huts where we go and meet the soldiers waiting to be called to the front.

It is a tense, tragic atmosphere we live in now, never-to-be-forgotten, I think the end is nearing, however, in about two months.

JEWS LEND AID TO IRISH LOAN

Second Week of Bond Drive Opens in Boston With Renewed Enthusiasm

Two Boston Jews entered subscriptions of $25 each to the Irish Loan, which today entered upon the second week of its drive here with renewed stimulus. At the headquarters at the American House, subscribers were on hand before 9 a. m., and during the forenoon a crowd of bond buyers was passing in and out. During the first few hours the subscriptions totaled nearly $1,000, practically all in same amounts.

The speech by Cardinal O'Connell yesterday is believed to be largely responsible for the increased impetus given to the loan today. With announcement of the two Jewish contributors, Edward F. McSweeney paid a high tribute to the people of that race, at the same time scoring the wealthy Irish who have not responded to the call for funds to finance Irish freedom. He said, in part:

POOR SUPPORTING DRIVE.

"I want to say of our Jewish brethren, as contrasted with the Irish, that the rich Jew never forgets his own poor, and no degree of influence can make him forget his obligations to his brother Jew. Some of the rich Irish should take that to heart in his bond certificate campaign. We are getting them slowly, but it is the poor, hard-working Irish people who are supporting the drive."

Mr. McSweeney criticised a prominent city official, who, in excusing himself for an apparent slight to the Irish people, had declared himself "very fond of the Irish."

"I told him not to say that again," said Mr. McSweeney, "for the expression indicated that he regarded the Irish as a race of servants."

UNIONS BUY BONDS.

It was reported that as a result of the indorsement of the loan by local labor, many labor unions had not only taken in individual subscriptions, but had subscribed to the loan as organizations.

P. J. Moynihan has been appointed new director for the State to succeed H. L. Eddy, who has been recalled to New York, to do campaign work here. James T. Barrett, president of the Cambridge City Council, received $500 worth of subscriptions during the first two hours of the drive today. Nearly all the subscriptions, it was stated, were for bonds of the $25 and $50 denominations, and comparatively few for $10.

LAUD SUPPORT OF HEARST

Pledging $5,000 for Irish bond certificates members of the Knights and Ladies of the Clarens'a Association at a meeting in Deacon Hall, 1651 Washington street, South End, appointed a committee to canvass various wards to assist in raising that amount.

Every member of the organization is on record as subscribing for bonds. Addresses were made by James L. Sullivan, a newspaper man; John J. Foley, vice-president of the State branch of the American Commission on Irish Independence, and P. J. Douglass.

William Randolph Hearst's work for the Irish cause and the support given to the Irish bond certificate drive by the Boston American were cheered and applauded at a mass meeting of the parishioners of St. Joseph's Church in the parochial school hall on Regent street, Roxbury. Msgr. Michael J. Splaine, pastor of the church, joined in the applause, as did other priests present.

"Mr. Hearst and his chain of newspapers are doing splendid work for the cause of Irish independence," said Chairman James A. Dorsey, former head of the League Trustees of Boston. "We are deeply indebted to the Boston American for the magnificent work it is doing in combatting English propaganda and telling the truth about Ireland."

PROVES CLAIMS OF ERIN.

Edward F. McSweeney gave a scholarly address on the schemes of the English government, showed where Ireland fitted as a country entitled to independence, and presented a compendious argument to show the workings of the English diplomats in adding territory to the British Empire which seeks to maintain Ireland at all costs.

Other speakers were Charles S. O'Connor of the Boston School Committee, Miss Minnie Mulrey, Thomas F. Phelan and Father Splaine. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Ward 17 Irish Bond Drive Committee, of which William P. Dwyer is head. Offices were opened today for the sale of the bonds at No. 161 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury. Mr. Dwyer will be in charge.

Rev. James P. F. Kelley, pastor of St. John's Church, Cambridge, will speak tonight at a mass meeting in the interests of the drive in St. John's School Hall, Bridge avenue, North Cambridge. The meeting opens at 8 o'clock. Other speakers will be heard.

P. J. Moynihan Leads Irish Bond Drive

Before coming to Boston the new director of the campaign, whose photograph appears herewith, was an influential figure in New York. The photograph shows an Irish republic poster.

P. J. Moynihan, prominent local Irish leader, today assumed directorship of the Massachusetts campaign for the sale of bond certificates of the Republic of Ireland, taking the place of H. L. Eddy, who was recalled for work in other sections of the country by the national headquarters of the American Commission on Irish Independence.

Mr. Moynihan, who lives at No. 53 Johnswood road, Roslindale, came to this country in 1912. Before coming to Boston three years ago he was an influential Irish organization worker in New York city.

Throughout the State he is well known through his secretaryship of the Friends of Irish Freedom. He is president of the Robert Emmet Branch, Friends of Irish Freedom, member of St. Brendan's Society and was a delegate to the Irish race convention in Philadelphia a year ago. During the last tour of President De Valera in New England he arranged details for the trip and acted as personal companion to the chief executive of Ireland.

HUSBAND AND WIFE FIGHT AT CARD GAME

A North End family row over cards resulted in the arrest of Mrs. Maria Tettilia, aged twenty-five, of No. 460 Hanover street, on a charge of assault and battery with a knife with intent to kill, and treatment at the Relief Station of her husband, Pasquale Tettilia, for a stab wound in the chest and two lacerated fingers on his left hand. The man's condition is not serious.

Warns Students to Shun Nude in Art

The 10,000 students who will go to Paris for study during the next twelve months were warned against the nude in art by the Rev. J. Ross Fisher of that city in his address today to Kingsley Hall, before the Baptish ministers of Greater Boston.

Rev. Mr. Fisher is here to raise $2,000,000 to build a large church plant in the Latin quarter of Paris, the aim of which will be to keep the morals of young people from America up to a high standard.

"We must protect the moral interests of the young people who go abroad for study," said Rev. Mr. Fisher.

CURLEY LAUDS HEARST PAPERS

"Could Not Be Bought by British Gold," Says Former Mayor

"The policies and editorial columns of William Randolph Hearst's chain of newspapers could not be bought or prostituted by British gold."

Tumultuous applause greeted this statement by ex-Mayor James M. Curley in St. Mary's Hall, East Boston, at a mass meeting under the auspices of the East Boston Irish bond drive committee. The former Mayor spoke on "English Spies and British Propaganda." He told of Lord Northcliffe buying up the American press.

"But there is one great, shining example and exception among the newspapers of America," he said. "The Hearst newspapers stood forth as pure, incorruptible exponents of incorruptible Americanism.

"William Randolph Hearst is the greatest living American."

The hall was crowded to capacity long before the meeting began. At no point did the enthusiasm reach a greater height than during the utterances of the former Mayor in regard to the Hearst newspapers.

James J. Mellen of Charlestown, another speaker, said that the fight is not alone for Irish freedom, but also for American independence.

Officials for the auxiliary will be elected as soon as the charter has been granted. Miss Grace Mitchie is in charge of the tentative organization.

PERSHING SENDS HIS THANKS TO EDWARDS

"My Dear General:

"I wish to thank you for the courtesy which you showed me during my brief visit to Boston, and for your charming hospitality at luncheon, which I and my staff enjoyed."

SEEK MORE MEMBERS FOR AMERICAN VOLUNTEERS

Man Wins Divorce in Ninety Seconds

One of the most unusual divorces in the history of the State was granted in one and a half minutes in the Dedham court today, with the plaintiff absent and his wife the only witness.

The divorce was granted by Judge Walt of Boston at a special session of the Norfolk Superior Court, to Joseph E. Butman of Cohasset, who has been living with a woman he believed to be his wife since 1881.

Butman, an old time engineer on the New Haven road and a veteran of the Civil War, was confined to his bed by illness. His first wife, Mrs. Geddy Butman, was the only witness called. She testified that she married him at Trenton, N. J., January 15, 1866, on his way back from the war.

The witness also testified that they resided in Albany, New York, and South Boston, in which place she left her husband on March 15, 1873. Three children were taken by the mother when she went away.

This was the extent of Mrs. Butman's testimony, and was followed by the granting of a divorce to her husband.

It was learned, however, that in 1881 Butman paid $50 to a Brockton lawyer to secure a divorce, which he believed was secured. He then married Mrs. Mary Stewart, his present wife who also gave birth to three children.

It was understood that because of the unusual circumstances, no legal action would be taken against Butman.

SYMPHONY MEN TO PLAN ACTION

Consider Next Move if Judge Cabot Fails to Make Reply

A special meeting of the committee of eight from the union players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was held today to consider what action will be taken by tre players in the event of Judge Cabot failing to make a reply to the request of the union men for a conference with the board of trustees.

The communication had also asked for a flat increase of $1,000 for some of the members.

Developments in relation to the demands for union affiliation by members of the orchestra indicate the possibility that several of its members might accept an offer with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra at salaries considerably higher than those which they receive here.

E. Vanden Beemt, representing the Philadelphia Orchestra, denied that he had any intention of "raiding" the Boston orchestra of its members.

"I have no intention of signing contracts with any members," Mr. Beemt declared. "I merely wished to know if any of the Boston men would be available to join the Philadelphia company. A similar condition may arise in our own orchestra in a few weeks, due to the 'raids' by Western organizations, such as Detroit and Cleveland, to secure players from the famous Eastern orchestras. We only desire to protect ourselves against an onslaught on our personnel.

"I have made no definite arrangements with any Boston Symphony members, although I have interviewed many today, and others have called me on the telephone to arrange for meetings."

WORLD FAMOUS SINGERS HERE

Chicago Opera Company Includes One With Gray Blue and Dark Eyes

The brave and the fair, world-famed all, took the city by storm when the Chicago opera singers pulled into Boston with its Russian, French and Spanish members; its petted poodle dogs, its bright-eyed chorus girls and its singing celebrities.

Among those who arrived for the two weeks' stay of the opera were Rosa Raisa, Giacomo Rimini, Virgilio Lazzari, Ruth Page, Evelyn Herbert, Marie Claessens, Myrna Sharlow, Irene Pavlowkow, with her twelve-year-old daughter, Alfred Maguenat, Allessandro Dolci, Edmund Warnery, Forest Lamont and Teofilo de Angelis, conductor.

Perhaps the member who attracted the most attention was Ruth Page, whose frock of black and white checked silk just reached to her knees. A costly fur coat and Parisian gray shoes and stockings, were other essential parts of her garb.

Madame Rosa Raisa, who went to the Somerset, was very explicit as to her eyes. They were gray in the morning, she confessed, blue at night, and dark on the stage. The fair lady hoped that her soul was not as changeable as her eyes; indeed, they were not, she affirmed. She is a Russian who has taken out her first citizenship papers. Her family, living near Warsaw, have stood prosecutions from the Poles, the Russians, the Germans and the Bolsheviste.

With Madame Raisa was a dog that goes with her everywhere—Virgoia, by name—a little Mexican, small enough to fit inside her muff.

The Chicago Grand Opera Company are in Boston for a fortnight's stay.

ZANGWILL UPHOLDS RUSSIAN POLICY

By ISRAEL ZANGWILL.
(Noted British Author and Zionist Leader.)

London, March 1.—I do not defend the red terror, but if the Supreme Council cannot recognise the Soviets because of "Bolshevist horrors," why haven't we applied this standard to the governments of the Czar, Abdul Hamid and Leopold, the monster of the Congo (the late Belgian King).

The government which starved the Germans by an illegitimate blockade, drew them into the peace trap, and then sought to keep them down for war by a "League of Damnations," should be the last to talk about morality.

Bolshevism, so far from being the antithesis of Christianity, is merely an applied form thereof; it is only forced application thereof that is anti-Christian.

Churchill's (British minister of war) class has governed Europe into the graveyard, and the world must be saved from its governors.

URGES AMERICA TO AID EGYPT

Joseph W. Folk Says League Article Gives England Autocratic "Protectorate"

Washington, March 1.—Asserting that article 147 of the peace treaty would turn Egypt over to Great Britain as a subject and conquered nation, in violation of the principle of self-determination and despite the pledges of the British government and the British king, unless the United States refuses to ratify section six of this article without an interpretation of the word "protectorate" Joseph W. Folk, counsel for the people of Egypt, said:

"The case of Egypt presents the most startling illustration in international history of the aggression of a great nation upon the rights of a small nation. Britain's plea is necessity. That was the excuse given by Germany for the violation of Belgium. That plea is out of keeping with the world's new temper.

WOULD BAN U. S. COTTON.

"If the United States is persuaded to underwrite the theft of Egypt for Great Britain, then self-determination in Egypt is destroyed. The United States is concerned in various ways. It is vitally interested from a commercial standpoint. There is a report on file in the State Department from the foreign trade advisers which shows that one of the reasons for Great Britain's determinations to seize and keep Egypt is to develop the cotton production there so as to free England from the necessity of purchasing cotton in the United States."

Mr. Folk adds that the report reveals the fact that the Egyptians are not permitted to manufacture their own cotton, but are required to send it to Great Britain for manufacture; also that they are not permitted to make use of their abundant water power, because this would reduce the demand for British coal.

The present protectorate, which was announced as a war measure in 1914, he explains, is different from the old protectorate established in 1883 and every assurance was given, not only to the people of Egypt, but to the allied and associated governments, that it would be only for the duration of the war.

HUNDREDS KILLED.

Nevertheless, Egypt's delegates to the peace conference were deported to Malta and imprisoned there and demonstrations which followed this action were suppressed by machine gun fire, hundreds of persons being killed and wounded in Cairo and elsewhere. Finally the delegates were released and permitted to go to Paris, but in the meantime Article 147 had been adopted and they were refused a hearing.

"Shall Egypt, without the consent of the Egyptians, be turned over to England for the sake of England's influence or mastery?" asks Mr. Folk. "The approval of this so-called protectorate by the United States would be accepted by Great Britain as an approval of the present holding of Egypt as a mode of war and would rivet the chains of abject slavery upon the Egyptian people."

World Deceived on Russia's Condition, Says Lebic

By COMMANDER LEBIC.

(Former Member of the Chamber of Deputies, who has just returned from an official military mission to Siberia.)

(Written Expressly for Universal Service.)

Paris, March 1.—After a whole year spent in Siberia studying conditions there, I am compelled to declare that France and the rest of the world have been systematically deceived with regard to conditions in Russia, despite my own reports which were sent regularly to the French government explaining the truth.

Had France known the truth it would not have lent its support to the Omsk government, which was combined of timid elements and partisans of Czarism scheming for reaction. Russia has been deceived. Communists and extreme reactionaries, Europe's error has been to support the former against the latter. The former are only a small minority and not representative of the aspirations of the people, the mass of whom are sober Democrats asking only to be left in peace to undisowned that mass which was the most formidable enemy of violence, murder and pillage, because, although hating Czarism, it remained faithful to the revolution in order to achieve freedom.

Great Britain was the first of the powers to recognize Russia and began long ago to prepare the road for a new policy. France and the rest of the world are now following suit, but it would have been better if they had led.

Denekine's Forlorn Hope Will Be Killed by Peace

London, March 1.—The army of General Denekine, last of the "old guard," which is still fighting the Russian Soviet forces in South Russia, will receive its death blow not at the hands of the Reds in the field of battle, but with the news that the Allies are about to recognize Soviet Russia.

This prediction was made by Eugene Sablina, chief of affairs here of the Denekine government. As soon as Denekine's soldiers hear of the Supreme Council's decision to make with the Soviets, they will give up the fight and disperse, Sablina believes.

Incidentally, M. Sablina revealed that the embassies and legations of the late Russian provisional government throughout the world are about to close down, because of lack of funds.

Marjorie Wood, who succeeded Florence Reed as the Arabian Slave, in "Chu Chin Chow," when that attraction was playing at the Shubert Theatre, last season, has made a sensational success in the role and will be seen in it when the show returns to Boston and plays at the Boston Opera House, March 14.

"Chu Chin Chow" will be given at the Boston Opera House with the same spectacular effects which distinguished it at the Century Theatre, New York. It was necessary to crowd it at the Shubert, last season, but Comstock and Gest have promised to show Boston the piece as it really is.

EXEMPTION FOR CHARITY AID

Credit for Contributions Is Allowed in Filing Income Tax Returns

The income tax law allows a person, in figuring his 1919 net income, to take credit for contributions made during that year to organizations conducting charitable, scientific, educational, and religious work; to societies for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals; also to the special fund authorized by the vocational rehabilitation act.

Before claiming any deduction under this provision of the law a taxpayer should carefully consider what is allowable. There should be no guesswork or estimates or setting down a lump sum, but the taxpayer should show only the contributions as he made them and as he can substantiate them.

Care should be taken that amounts given to individuals are not included and that the deduction is confined strictly to donations during the year to organizations operated without benefit to the persons behind the movement. For instance, a gift made to a hospital which may bring profit to the persons interested in the institution would not be a detuctible item.

All donations to churches are deductible, including those for missionary funds, church building funds, pew rents, and church assessments and church dues.

After listing his contributions of an allowable nature, the taxpayer should see that he does not claim an amount over the limit established by law, which is 15 per cent. of the year's net income, computed without the benefit of this deduction.

Contributions may be made in cash or other property; if other than cash, the value of the property must be accurately determined.

ARREST 5 MORE IN LOOT PLOT

Lawrence Police Allege Wholesale Merchandise Thievery; Arrest Alleged Receiver

Lawrence, March 1.—Following on the capture of Howard Morgan, aged thirty-six, alleged confessed burglar, five local men were arrested on charges of receiving stolen property. It is probable that other arrests will be made in connection with what promises to be one of the most sensational cases of wholesale merchandise thievery unearthed in years.

Morgan was arrested after a footprint in the snow was matched to his overshoe. Most of the missing loot has been discovered, although it took six officers and the entire detective corps of the local police department twenty-four hours to complete the job. The confession of the alleged burglar involved prominent Italians.

The men arrested for receiving the stolen property and arraigned before Judge J. J. Mahoney today in the District Court follow:

Alfio Fichero, No. 9 Bradley avenue, Methuen; Joseph Mirtello, No. 17 Farley street, Methuen; Rocco Miele, No. 232 Merrimac street, Methuen; Crassienso Zarmin and Isaac Zarmin, No. 78 Marilline avenue, Methuen. All the defendants were released on bail of $500 each.

Morgan, the principal in the alleged robbery, who was also arraigned, is claimed to have a long record in Haverhill, his home city. The police followed a tip and located the stolen goods in Pleasant Valley, Methuen. Scores of pairs of shoes, auto tires, tools and small articles are included in the booty recovered.

The robbery of three Methuen farms is said to have been admitted by Morgan. The police have located forty-seven stolen hens taken from the farms. Three South Lawrence stores were robbed by Morgan, it is alleged. The police, who allege that Morgan is an adept in using a jimmy, identified him by a scar on his ear, which was made by a bullet from a police officer's revolver during a Haverhill robbery.

"CARTRIDGE" SILK IS TO BE WORN THIS YEAR

Several Boston manufacturers are preparing to handle "cartridge" silk extensively this Summer. "Cartridge" silk is the fabric which the War Department is salvaging in such huge quantities from otherwise useless army supplies. It is being eagerly bought up by manufacturers and the cutting-up trade for use in suits, hats, sport shoes, bathing suits, shirts, cloaks, tents, sunchades and household draperies.

VERMONT OUT OF SUFFRAGE RACE

Governor Refuses to Call Extra Session to Pass Franchise Bill

Burlington, Vt., March 1.—All hopes that Vermont would become a suffrage State by its own vote in time for the Presidential election have vanished. A letter was made public, written by Governor Clement to Colonel J. E. Piddock, chairman of the Republican State Committee, in which the Governor states that he has received a copy of the resolutions passed by the Republican State Committee asking for an extra session of the Legislature for the purpose of passing the Presidential suffrage bill.

He declines to call such a session and continues the stand that he held last Winter, when he vetoed such a bill, which had passed both branches of the Legislature.

Clement contends that the suffrage bill infringes on the State constitution and is in fact an amendment of it. It cannot therefore be legal in the eyes of the State laws without first giving the people an opportunity to express their views. He further says that if the resolutions were drawn by the committee for propaganda purposes, they have adequately served their aim.

BELIEVE INFLUENZA CAME FROM MANILA

New York, March 1.—The recent influenza epidemic started in the Philippines, it is believed. William F. The influenza raged in and near Manila last December, and is thought to have been brought to America by ships touching at Atlantic ports.

New York, March 1.—The hugeness of the Knights of Columbus reconstruction campaign is shown in the annual report, published at headquarters here. The Knights now contemplate a nation-wide employment and information service for the agricultural communities.

OPEN SEASON FOR DISCOVERING NEW BABE RUTHS IS NOW ON

BARROW'S JOB QUITE SIMPLE

Has Only to Develop Three or Four Sluggers and a Flock of Pitchers to Win

By JACK CONWAY.

Hot Springs, Ark., March 1.—The open season for discovering new Babe Ruths is now on. Without missing a single meal the Red Sox party has successfully hopped across the greater part of the land of prohibition and is today encamped safely in the dining room of the Majestic Hotel.

All Manager Barrow has to do to make the pennant race a procession is to develop three or four Ruths and a couple of Ellers out of the flock of recruits who will eat here at the expense of Harry Frazee. It is no easy to perform this task as it would be to keep smiling after getting your jaw in the way of Bobby Dyson's left-hand smashes.

Before the other experts get warmed up properly your humble correspondent is going to let you in on a little discovery. Two of the rookies remind me a lot of our old pal, Babe. They are Cuddy Murphy, the former Dartmouth pitcher, and Flaherty, who is as popular with Western baseball fans as Mayo Mugrasy is in East Boston. Murphy scales 215 pounds, which is two pounds more than Ruth weighed when at Tampa last Spring.

Great in Dinner Plate League

Cuddy must be some sort of a relative to the packer judging by the mean way he attacks a sirloin steak. If he can win ball games like he can eat steak the Sox have the pennant won. It is a good thing Ruth is not with the team for he couldn't give much attention to knocking home runs with this Murphy person trying to prove his stomach is a cold storage plant. You know Babe always prided himself on the fact he could outeat any man on the outfit by two to one, whatever that means.

Flaherty reminds us a lot of Ruth by the way he gets into an uppity berth. It's graceful, don't cher know.

The Ruth-less (printer, please don't omit the hyphen) Red Sox were not asked to do any training today. They were tired as a result of making numerous trips to the dirtiest and undesired an opportunity to gaze upon the relics of the cabaret shows which once made this banker the rendesvous of many dreary souls. The nearest thing to a cabaret show here now is a place where they sell mineral water and pop corn while a player piano grinds out tunes which were popular when Jimmy Collins was the king of third basemen.

Ball Players Only Have Baseball

The race track is also as lonesome as your favorite saloon. All of which means that the ball players will have nothing to occupy their attention but baseball; this isn't the worst thing possible from the viewpoint of the management. There will, of course, be the dances at the various hotels. Ruth, in the past, took it upon himself to organize the social affairs. With the bafferer among the missing, Cuddy Murphy or somebody else will have to become a social lion.

Babe is greatly missed by his former teammates. They have not forgotten his terrific batting or boyish good nature which helped to pass away the hours during a long train ride. If anybody tried to fool you Ruth was unpopular with his teammates, you may put that person down as one trying to get attention by poor deal from a Boston standpoint or as one who doesn't know the Red Sox players.

Many Changes Wrought by Time and Trades

Everett Scott, the game's greatest shortstop, is the only player here who was with Bill Carrigan's team at the Springs back in 1914. Harry Hooper is the only other member of Carrigan's championship band of 1914 who still wears a Red Sox uniform. Time and desire to exchange star ball players for money have wrought many changes in the ranks of the Boston team. Scott, as usual, is in splendid condition. During the Winter he played a lot of basketball.

Paddy Livingston will get busy tomorrow with the pitchers. Of the recruits Holbrow, Flaherty and Lynch are highly recommended. If Livingston can get one high-grade performer out of the flock of new players he will be satisfied.

Weakness in Box Lost Many Games

Weakness in the box was responsible for a lot of the Red Sox troubles last year. With Ruth a regular in the outfield, the team started the season with Mays, Pennock, Jones, Caldwell and Bush as its best hurling bets. Bush developed a bad arm which made him useless to the club. Caldwell was not dependable, while Mays became demoralized after getting off to a poor start.

The pitching outlook today is not as good as it was a year ago. Things, however, may brighten up after Livingston begins to use his magic. Meanwhile we are not going to worry about such littin things as pitchers, as the sun is shining down here in the Southwest where those who wish can pick violets amid the green grass which covers the Ozarks.

48 BAY STATE GOLFERS START IN PINEHURST PLAY

By ROBERT E. HARLOW

Pinehurst, N. C., March 1.—Forty-five Massachusetts golfers were included in the field of more than 300 which started today in the qualifying round of the greatest annual free-for-all golf tournament of the year. New Hampshire had three representatives, Maine two and Rhode Island one.

This is the Spring tournament, and, while it does not draw the cracks of the North and South amateur championships or of any championship event, the list of starters included quite a number of high class play certain in the top divisions.

A large part of the New England delegation arrived late last week, and have been playing thirty-six holes a day in order to warm up properly for the big show. Few of the golfers are at their best, but Massachusetts will undoubtedly place its proportion of men in the first and second sixteens. One of the attractions in this tournament is that a golfer can take a million shots and still get into the match play, for there will be as many sixteens as are necessary to give all a place in the match rounds.

Massachusetts Delegation by Far the Largest

There are two days of qualifying, the field playing eighteen holes tomorrow. The match play rounds will be at eighteen holes and enough prizes will be given away to fill a pung. The players are approaching the event because they are certain to have four days' tournament play, those being put out Wednesday in the first round of match play continuing Thursday in the consolation section.

Massachusetts is far better represented than any other State and has the distinction of being led by F. C. Newton, of the Brookline Country Club, who was recently elected captain of the Bay State team. Newton is one of the favorites to win along with J. W. Stearns, Jr., of Nassau, Sam Graham of Greenwich and Donald Parsons of Youngstown.

Among the best shots from Massachusetts who have to qualify in the first flight are Billy Whitcomb, W. H. Fuller and Stanley Brennan of Worcester, J. N. Manning of Brae-Burn, W. S. Dillon of Fitchburg, Fred B. Elliot of Woodland and George Murphy of Wollaston.

Special Worcester Tournament

Harry L. Ayer of Brae-Burn, a former president of the Massachusetts Golf Association, was among the starters.

Worcester Country Club, with fifteen starters, led all other clubs in the number of entries. The Worcester Club members and three others from Worcester county are conducting a tournament all by themselves in connection with the qualifying rounds. They will take their State handicaps from their thirty-six-hole medal scores in the qualifying round and the net winner will take away the Worcester County Pinehurst cup donated by W. W. Windle of Millbury. This cup is played for twice each year, once here and in the Summer at the Worcester course. It is now held by Billy Whitcomb. He hopes to repeat.

Big Crowd on Links for Sunday Golf

Weather conditions were good for golf Sunday morning and there was a large crowd on the links. Rain followed by light snow drove the golfers to the clubhouse in the afternoon, but professionals playing in an exhibition match for a purse made up by the guests, Jock Hutchison and George McLean beat out Emmett French by a shot. McLean had a 74 over the course.

A State law prohibits the colored boys and men who caddying on Sunday, so they observe the day shooting craps. By this means a few lucky rollers win on Sunday all the cash the colored population collects in caddying throughout the week. Some one has urged that the State legislature be informed of how the caddies take advantage of their day of, figuring that the rule regarding caddying may thereby be changed.

Mrs. Barlow to Compete in Many Tournaments

Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow of Merion, a former holder of the national title and an oft-time winner of the North and South event, registered at the club today. She is going to take in all the important women's championships this year, including the North and South, the United States, the British and all the sectional championships held in the Pennsylvania district.

The New England golfers, outside of Connecticut, who played in today's qualifying round were: Harry L. Ayer, Brae-Burn; C. Anderson, Woodland; S. K. Ames, Winchester; W. P. Arnold, Brockton; J. R. Bowker, Woodland; C. C. Boyden, Foxboro; W. B. Hallon, North Attleboro; H. H. Bond, Manchester, N. H.; R. H. Curlette, Bar Harbor; C. E. Chase, Manchester, N. H.; Frank L. Dunne, Wollaston; W. S. Herring, New Bedford; C. C. Hoyt, Brookline; H. W. Jennings, Manchester, N. H.; Herton E. Kite, Providence; Thomas F. Lelley, Lowell; Frank Lee, Framingham; Charles Longhead, Woodland; W. H. FRIENDS OF BARR TO PROTEST JUDGE'S RULING

Followers of Johnny Barr, the fleet little sprinter of the B. A. A., will protest the ruling of the judge of finish at the New England A. A. A. U. championship over the 40 yards in the big games at Mechanics Building Saturday night. They believe that Barr was deprived unfairly of a New England sprinting title, or else the judges of finish or the referee were not together on the job when it came to selecting the final place winners in the championship event.

BRAVES' PARTY EVER GROWING

Now Numbers Ten Players, With More Coming—To Reach Camp Tomorrow

By NICK FLATLEY.

Washington, March 1.—The Braves' invasion of the Land of Peach Blossoms is acting more or less like the snowball rolling down hill. It keeps getting more sizeable all the time.

When the party left Boston, there were three athletes present—Horace Ford, Cy Morgan and Marty Shea, who decided to become a Brave overnight and purchased his release from some club or other out in Oklahoma. Marty should help greatly in the Stallings infield problem.

Eddie Eayers, once of Brown, was assimilated at Providence and Captain Rabbit Maranville hopped on at New Haven. The midget showed he was in mid-season form, as they say, by batting about Sunday dates, and growing a bit at two nights on the well-known sleepers.

Little Richie Rudolph and Hugh McQuillen swelled the party at New York, both hurlers reporting good condition and hope of the biggest year, as per specifications.

Hod Ford, Sullivan, Ravin and White, three of the ambitious rookies, parked their grips in the Braves' special car. There will be no further additions until Atlanta, where Pitcher Hugh Brown, southpaw, joins. The rest of the athletes will be met at Columbus, Ga., tomorrow noon, provided the train happens to be on time.

They will be piloted by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt.

Eleven foreigners have entered the race at a cost of $17,000 to the promoters. Champman and Hanson, including the sensational Belgians, Buyssse and Deschamps, winners of the Brussels six-day race two weeks ago. MARTIN READY FOR DYSON GO

Little Fellows Battle in Feature Bout at Mechanics Building Tomorrow Night

A capacity crowd is looked for tomorrow night in Mechanics Building when Bobby Dyson and Terry Martin of Providence come together to decide which youngster has the right to put in first claim to the bantamweight title.

Dyson has been camping on the trail of Wilde for several months and was practically matched for the title, but the Briton decided to call a bout off after the local lad had agreed to about everything except the decision in advance.

Memphis Pal Moore was originally slated to battle the New Bedford star, but injured his hand in training. The club directors located Martin as the next best boy in sight to tackle the New England title holder and the bout promises to be as good as the earlier booking.

The Armory directors have arranged a well-balanced card of preliminaries.

ALL-STAR SHOW FOR SUFFOLK A. A. MEMBERS

Another all-star card is on the schedule for Wednesday night at the Suffolk A. A. Three ten-round bouts and two six-rounders should furnish plenty of action. Howard McRae of Cambridge and Joe Jawson of Milwaukee will mix in one of the ten-round bouts. McRae is one of the best of the local scrappers, while Jawson showed up well in his recent work with Vincent Martin at the Commercial Club.

The other two ten-round bouts will have Martin clashing with Young Kop of New Bedford and Johnny Noonan of Dorchester swapping punches with Johnny Giblin of Roxbury. Both these bouts will be filled with plenty of action. The two six-round bout will have local boys mixing.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR HILLMAN

Dartmouth Coach Has Nucleus of Intercollegiate Championship Team

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Gaining the 1920 intercollegiate track and field championship and placing several of his men on the American Olympic team looms as a possible and well-earned reward for Coach Dory Hillman as the result of the brilliant victory achieved by his Dartmouth track team over such powerful rivals as Cornell and Harvard, in the triangular meet at Mechanics Building.

To be sure this was an indoor meet and its program did not include many of the events scheduled in the intercollegiate and Olympic games. It did serve to show, however, that the Dartmouth coach possesses an excellent dash and weight man in Sheburne, a champion hurdler and place-producing high jumper in Thomson, middle distance men of real ability in Coakley, McCloughran, Prentis and Jordon; a possible hammer-throw champion in Weld, and two broad jumpers of great promise, although not possessing the ability of Harry Worthington, Dartmouth's former intercollegiate and National broad jump champion. In fact, only in the long distance runs does the Green team show a weakness, and this weakness may be remedied before the outdoor games are staged.

War Broke Up Best Dartmouth Team

The declaration of war on Germany cost Dartmouth the 1917 intercollegiate championship and made negative Coach Hillman's spectacular accomplishment in bringing the Green from relative obscurity in track athletics to the very forefront; and when it was ended Warren Hobbs, Dartmouth's greatest all-round star, had given his life for his country, while Harry Worthington, for three years national broad jump champion, and several other brilliant track and field performers were lost to Hillman through war degree graduation.

Moakley Expects Poor Track Year

Jack Moakley, coach of Cornell's track team, is of the opinion that college track sports this year, according to a statement made at the Harvard-Dartmouth-Cornell dual meet.

"I don't think we will see the same quality of track and field athletics this year as we did before the war," was his comment. "The majority of the men have been out of training for the game for two years," he added, "and it will take some time for them to return to their old form or for new men of equal capabilities to be developed."

Moakley, like "Pooch" Donovan, the Harvard coach, and Hillman, has no concern over the possibility of selection as boss of the American Olympic team.

Peacedale and Standish Worsteds

Peacedale Worsteds, 14 full ounces in weight, absolutely all wool, Dublin twisted worsted goods, bought with a great quantity, a number of pieces of which have been labelled "slight seconds," but they are, as far as my customer is concerned, absolutely perfect and I sell them as perfect merchandise, because I take all loss that may incur.

No other tailor in the country today, not excepting the high-priced, ready-made clothiers who talk about all wool and give you shoddy, will advertise a Dublin twisted, all wool worsted suiting, 14 ounces in weight, under $60 for a suit, and I contend these fabrics compare very favorably for quality of merchandise with the suit sold for $100.

I offer you three styles, a beautiful shade of dark brown, a beautiful shade of dark green and a wonderful shade of dark blue, Peacedale Worsted Suitings, 14 ounces in weight, on which are the original tickets, at a price of Standish Worsteds, 35 years in the woolen business, in which the words "Standish Worsteds" meant the finest manufactured, allow me to get extravagant in my praise of the three styles of absolutely all worsted, 14 ounces in weight fabrics, that I am offering today. The present market makes Standish Dublin Twisted, all worsted goods synonymous with the price of $80 for a suit of clothes.

I offer you three styles of Standish Worsteds, that no other tailor in the country advertises to sell under at least three times the price. These goods bear the original tickets.

I also have a wonderful range of Blue Serge, Fancy Worsteds and fine Cheviot Suitings, some absolutely all wool, some contain a percentage of cotton. My price for three-piece suit to order,

This Day in Our History—March 1, 1920

THIS is the anniversary of the setting aside of Yellowstone Park, in 1872, as a national preserve. The park contains 3,350 square miles and also some of the most notable bits of mountain scenery in the world. It is stocked with wild animals.

The Name of the Collie

THE collie's name appears to be shrouded in mystery, but there seems to be a fairly reasonable foundation for supposing that it is from "coll" or "collar," on account of the broad white mark round the neck which is seen in the majority of these dogs.

"What's in a Name?"

Facts about your name; its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day and jewel.

BEATRICE

SCORES of lovely women have answered to the name of Beatrice. It comes from the old verb beo, meaning to make happy or bless, but because the Beatrices of history have invariably been extraordinarily beautiful does not signify that they have been happy, nor that their loveliness has given pleasure to beholders, for some of them have been the wickedest women of their time and brought suffering and destruction wherever they went.

So it seems rather curious that the name should have such an auspicious and indeed ecclesiastical beginning.

The Church first used the word beo to apply to her departed members who were gathered together somewhere on the Isle of the Blest, and in time it was bestowed on living members

There was even a St. Beatus of Beat, who was an anchorite near Vendome in the 6th century.

The original Beatrice, called then Beatrix, is said to have been borne by a Christian maiden who in Diocletian's persecution drew the murdered bodies of her brothers from the Tiber and buried them. She afterward shared their fate and her relics were enshrined in a church in Rome.

But lovely and estimable as this maiden was, it is not she who is remembered so vividly as the exquisite Beatrice Portinari, love of Dante's youth, whom he immortalized in verse and who represents, with him, one of the famous loves of history. Dante has set a standard for feminine beauty in all subsequent Beatrices when he says:

"One charm remark, peculiarly hers—
An elegance unmatched with modesty combined;
'And would you see it in a living proof,'
Says Thought to me, 'attend well to thy mind,
When, with a lady elegant and fair
Harmoniously conjoined, she moves along:
Then as the brilliant stars seem chased away,
By greater brightness of the advancing sun,
So vanish other charms when hers are viewed.'"

Unfortunately for the world, the "habits of virtue and of loyalty" of which Dante also sings are not to be found in some of the Beatrices of early centuries. Beatrice de Cenci, for instance, had a heart as black as her face was lovely.

The French have adopted Beatrix and added to it Benoite, deriving the latter from benus, an adjective taken from the same beo and meaning good. From the same source comes the Italian Benedita, Betta, and Bettina, which is usually and erroneously considered a diminutive of Elizabeth. Spain has contributed Benita and Germany gives us Benedikta and Benedictine. It remained for America to evolve the good old chorus favorite, "Trixie."

It is impossible to overestimate the effect of color in determining the supposed influence of gems upon the fortunes and health of their wearers. For that reason, every Beatrice should include a bit of basalt among her jewels to insure the immunity from evil which the talisman promises. While she wears it, Saturday should be her lucky day and 4 her potent number.

When a Girl Marries

Interesting Story of the Trials and Jealousies of a Bride

By Ann Lisle

EVVY came at 12 o'clock and we were whirled away to the dressmaker's. There she called for a dress for Phoebe, who, she declared, she had asked to help receive.

"How dare you ask Phoebe! You are presuming on Neal's chivalry."

This was what I wanted to say to Evvy when she showed me the hideous shade of gray in which she proposed to deck Phoebe and march her in Miss Evelyn Mason's triumph.

But I didn't utter a syllable of it. What good would it have done to throw down the gauntlet like that? For if I had, Evvy would probably have maneuvered Neal into a position where his boyish manliness and chivalry might have caused him to elope with her tomorrow.

After a minute spent in conquering my longing for the satisfaction of speaking out, I said this instead:

"Silver gray—that might do for me. Well, I haven't time to stand discussing color effects. I have a luncheon engagement and must run along."

"A luncheon engagement!" purred Evvy huskily. "Oh, I wanted you to come with me! I thought we'd 'phone Neal and Jimmie—or Tom, if you prefer. Now don't try to persuade Madame to give you the gray and switch the orange to Val Cosby and the desh to Phoebe. She takes her orders from me, and I tell you she obvious. Later you'll see how clever I was in my choice of colors."

"I don't question your cleverness," I replied, enjoying the force of my truthful reply. "See you Saturday at seven, Evvy. So long."

Then I leaned back in my chair and shot my bolt.

"Virginia, you won't go to that reception—nor let Phoebe when I tell you about Neal," I said grimly, inviting Virginia's everlasting dislike of my brother because it was the only weapon I had to use for Phoebe's defence.

Rather Melodramatic

"Very literary — and melodramatic, Anne," smiled Virginia tolerantly. "But I'm a practical person. You know I never approved of that boy and girl affair, and now that it's decently over, I don't see why Phoebe should be deprived of the social advantages of being one of Evelyn's attendants. I don't like the girl—you know that perfectly well. But she belongs to one of our oldest families and all the smartest people will be on her invitation list."

"But, Virginia," I protested, at a loss to comprehend her point of view, "don't you see how cruel it will be for Phoebe to see them together—and to let other people behold her misery?"

"Dear Anne—try to understand. It will be good training for Phoebe to 'see them together,' as you put it. If she has any lingering nonsensical ideas about the boy, her pride will help her banish them at once. And she will gain in poise and in social ease. Don't look at me so pitifully, as if you thought me hard and cruel. I'm thinking of Phoebe's own good."

Then I leaned back in my chair and shot my bolt.

"Virginia, you won't go to that reception—nor let Phoebe when I tell you about Neal," I said grimly, inviting Virginia's everlasting dislike of my brother because it was the only weapon I had to use for Phoebe's defence.

No More Chance to Escape

Then I dashed off, thanking the kind fates that had inspired me to make a luncheon engagement with Virginia when I telephoned in my vain effort to speak to Phoebe several hours before.

For weeks I have been avoiding a tete-a-tete with Virginia. Ever since the day when I heard of the formation of the Dalton-Sturges Realty Corporation and Neal's connection with it I've been mentally sidestepping a discussion of it with Virginia. It would hurt her. It must. Besides, it would be the one bit of fuel needed to make her dislike of Neal leap into an active blaze. I wanted to keep it from Virginia. I didn't even want to get into a position where she might read incriminating knowledge in my eyes.

But now, as I set out eagerly for my appointment with Virginia a relief Virginia would be after my hour with Evvy. When I arrived at the smart restaurant Virginia had designated as our meeting-place, I found her already there.

"Hullo, Jessie! Am I a bit late?" I asked apologetically.

"On time to the dot," she replied. "But I like to be sure of my favorite table on the Avenue side, so I started early. Being sure of the right places will help us back into the position in society that belongs to the Harrisons."

As I followed Virginia to our well-chosen table by the window I reflected intolerantly that social position was quite important to Virginia, and in another minute I recognized how much she'd pay for it. For, as soon as we had ordered, she settled back in her chair and said complacently:

"It was nice of Evelyn Mason to ask Phoebe to receive at her tea. I'd like the child to be a bridesmaid, for it would be a smart way for the right people to get their first glimpses of a girl. And by the Winter I hope we'll be in a position to launch her formally."

"Virginia," I cried, startled into brusqueness, "surely you aren't going to let Evvy Mason twist you around her little finger like this!"

Virginia's face paled, and she turned to me with the arrogance I had almost forgotten:

"What do you mean, Anne? Surely not to be as—offensive as you sound?"

"Oh, Jeanie, I'm sorry!" I apologized. "I didn't intend to be offensive. Only to startle you awake. I'm sure Phoebe and Neal care for each other. And—even if Evelyn Mason forces Neal to go through with the marriage into which she trapped him, we don't have to let her make her triumph complete by dragging Phoebe after her chariot wheels."

April Folly

By Cynthia Stockley

Watch for This Story in Motion Pictures

"April Folly," soon to be seen in leading motion picture theatres, is a Cosmopol'tan production, released through Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Artcraft picture, under direction of Robert Z. Leonard Scenario by Adrian Johnson.

DAYLIGHT faded; shadows stole through the open windows. In the large, low-ceiled room, clustered with saddles and harness ash exquisite pictures, grew dim except their white faces and the glistening of tears, as they drooped from Agatha Ide.

"I must ask to be forgiven," said Kanna, very humbly at last, "my only plea is that my friendship for Kerry blinded me. And"—he halted an instant before the confession of his trouble—"I once loved that little wayward girl."

So it was Diana Sandilands who had proved false and sent him into the wilds! Somehow, that explained much to them—much for forgiveness but very much more for pity and sympathy.

Suddenly the peace of eventide was rudely shattered by the jarring crank of a motor being geared for starting. Evidently Ghostie's friends were departing in the same aloof spirit with which they had held apart all the afternoon. No one in the studio stirred to speed the parting guests.

It did not seem fitting to obtrude upon the pride of the great. A woman's voice bade good-by, and Ghostie answered in a hard, tinny tone of a large rock fifty yards up the lane. A man called good-night, and they were off.

"By Jove, I know that fellow's voice!" puzzled Sarle. April thought he did, too, but she was in a kind of happy trance where voices did not matter. The next episode was Ghostie at the window, blotting out the evening skies.

"They have gone," she timidly announced.

"Ah, you go with them!" remarked Clive, more in relief than regret.

But there is still one of them in my room."

"What?"

"She has been waiting to speak to you all the afternoon; they all have, but they could not face the crowd."

"Poor fellows!" said Clive, with cutting irony.

"The one in my room's a girl," said Ghostie, "a friend of yours."

"She has strange ways," commented Clive glumly. "But ask her her to come in. These also are my friends."

Ghostie disappeared. Simultaneously, the two men arose, remarking that they must be going; they had stayed too late, and it was getting dark. Clive easily shut them up.

"Of course you can't go! Stay to supper and go back by the light of the moon. We've got to have some music and all sorts of things yet. Afterward, we'll come a bit of the way with you."

They did not need much persuasion to settle down and Clive passed around the cigarettes.

"We wont spoil the best hour of the day by lighting the lamps," he said.

They waited. In a minute or so they heard the strange girl approach and enter. She consisted of a number of rooms built in the form of a square round a little courtyard. Each room had one door to the other, but had also an outer door. Ghostie's room was third from the studio, with one between, unused because of huge holes in the floor.

It was through this dilapidated chamber that the girl could now be heard approaching, clicking her high heels and picking her way delicately by the aid of a candle, whose beams showed under the door and flickered across the courtyard at the back. In spite of its light she caught one of her high heels in a hole, and a faint but distinctly naughty word was heard, followed by a giggle.

As she reached the door, she blew out the candle. They heard the puff of her breath as plainly as they had heard the naughty word.

The Cinema Murder

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

"YOU should have seen me tear from the box! You know, ever since they showed me that signature at the bank I have had a queer idea at the back of my head. Luckily for him," she went on, patting his arm, "he sent home for me a fortnight ago, and sent a draft for my signature out. You won't mind will you, if I take him off now?" she concluded, turning to Elizabeth. "They are waiting supper for us, but I wasn't going to let Philip—"

"Did you know that Dane was going to be here?" Elizabeth asked.

All Forgiven

"Not an idea," Beatrice declared. "I simply dragged Douglas along here, as soon as we'd talked things out, because I knew that it would be the one thing wanting to complete Philip's happiness. We'll leave you now. Douglas will bring me back, and we are going to be married in a few days."

Philip held out his hand a little diffidently.

"You wouldn't—"

"My dear fellow," Douglas interrupted, grasping it, "wouldn't I! I'm thundering sorry for all you've been through. I suppose I ought to have let you know that I was still in the land of living, but I was waiting until things blew over in England. That's all right now, though," he went on. "I've turned over a new leaf and I am making money—making it after a style to pay my creditors twenty shillings in the pound before a couple of years have gone, and do pretty well for Beatrice and myself as well. You wouldn't care, I suppose," he added, with a kind of pretty well for Beatrice and myself as well. You wouldn't care, I supdrop in the corner of his eye, "to offer us just one glass of wine before we start out? Beatrice has been riddling me with questions and dragging me through the streets till I scarcely know whether I am on my head or my heels."

Philip emptied the contents of the champagne bottle into the glass. Never was wine poured out more gladly.

"Douglas," he explained, "this is Miss Elizabeth Dalstan, whom you saw act this evening. We were married this afternoon. You can understand, can't you, just what your coming has meant for us?"

Douglas shook Elizabeth by the hand. Then he held up his glass.

"Here's the best of luck to you both!" he said heartily. "Very soon Beatrice and I will ask you to wish us the same. Philip, old chap," he added, as he set his glass down and without the slightest protest watched it replenished, "that's a thundering good play of yours I've seen this evening, but you'll never write one to beat this!"

Soon Beatrice and Douglas also took their departure. Elizabeth held out her arms almost as the door closed. The tear-stains were still on her cheeks. Her lips quivered a little, but her voice was clear and sweet and passionate.

"Philip," she cried, "it's all over—it's all finished with—the dread, the awful days! I am not going to be hysterical any more, and you—you are just going to remember that we have everything we want in the world. Sit down opposite to me, if you please, and fill my glass. I have only one emotion left. I am hungry—desperately hungry. Move your chair nearer so that I can reach your hand. There! Now you and I will drink our little toast."

It was an hour before they thought of leaving the table. A very perplexed waiter brought them coffee and watched them light cigarettes. Then the telephone bell rang. They both stared at the instrument. Philip would have taken off the receiver, but Elizabeth held out her hand.

"I have an idea," she said. "I believe it is from Sylvanus Power. Let me answer it."

She held the receiver to her ear and listened.

"Yes," she murmured. "Yes. At what time?"

Her face grew more puzzled. She listened for a moment longer.

"But Sylvanus," she expostulated "what do you mean?—Sylvanus—Mr. Power."

The telephone had become a dumb thing. She replaced the receiver.

"I don't understand," she told Philip. "All that he said was—'You will receive my present at five o'clock this morning.'

"Does he think we are going to sit up for it?" Philip asked.

"He is the strangest man," she sighed.

Theatre Burns

After all, some queer fancy awoke Philip at a little before five that morning and drew him to the window. He sat looking out over the still sleeping city. All sound now was hushed. It was the brief breathing space before the dawn. In the near morning spring light, the buildings of the city seemed to stand out with a new marvellous distinctness.

Now and then from the harbor came the shriek of a siren. A few pale lights were still burning along the river way. From one of the city clocks the hour was slowly tolled. Philip counted the strokes —one, two, three, four, five. Then, almost as he was preparing to leave his post, there came a terrific roar. The window against which he leaned shook. Some of the buildings in the distance trembled.

One, with its familiar white cupola, seemed for a moment to be lifted from the ground and then split through by some unseen hand. The roar of the explosion was followed by the crashing of falling masonary. Long fingers of fire suddenly leapt up into the quiet, cool air. Fragments of masonry, a portion, even, of that wonderful cupola, came crashing down into the street. He heard Elizabeth's voice behind him, felt her fingers upon his shoulder.

"What is it? Philip, what is it?" He pointed with steady finger. The truth seemed to come to him by inspiration.

"It is Sylvanus Power's message to you," he replied. "The theatre!"

There were flames now, leaping up to the sky. Together they watched them and listened to the shrieking of sirenes and whistles as the fire engines galloped by from every section of the city. There was a strange look in Elizabeth's face as she watched the curling flames.

"Philip," she whispered, "thank God! There it goes, all his great offering to me! It's like the man and his mote—A man may do what he will with his own.' Only last night I felt as though I would give anything in the world never to stand upon the stage of that theater again. He doesn't know it, Philip, but his is a precious gift."

He placed his arm around her and drew her from the window.

"A man may do what he will with his own," he repeated. "Well, it isn't such a bad motto. Sylvanus Power may destroy a million-dollar theatre for a whim, but so far as you and I are concerned—"

She sighed with content.

"We do both need a holiday," she murmured. "Somewhere in Europe, I think."

How This New and Modern Candy Replaces The Old Brown Bottle

Discard Old-Fashioned Remedies Which May Do Harm

Don't you remember how, when you were a child, you despised that old brown bottle on the medicine shelf? How you shuddered every time mother got down that old bottle and came toward you, bottle in one hand and spoon in the other.

But that was the old way of taking laxative. Today Pastils candies have replaced the old brown bottle and are the modern way of taking a laxative. And not only do they act as a laxative which is mild, prompt and satisfying in its action, but they possess antiseptic features which tend to purify and disinfect the whole digestive tract and help prevent the breeding of disease germs which the medical authorities agree breed there.

DEAN RELATIVES MAKE PROTEST

Accuse Editor of Keene Sentinel of Garbling Report of Hearing

East Jaffrey, N. H., March 1.—William Dean Goddard of Pawtucket, R. I., nephew of Dr. William Kendrick Dean, has entered vigorous protest to Governor Hartlett and Editor Prentiss of the Keene Evening Sentinel because of the alleged garbled reports in the Sentinel relative to the last conference which the selectmen of this town and the relatives of Dr. Dean held with the Governor at Concord.

"REMARKS SUPPRESSED."

Mr. Goddard, acting for the relatives, sent the following telegram to Governor Bartlett:

"Keene Evening Sentinel of 13th inst., purporting to give full report of Charleston conference on Dean case, suppresses remarks by Henry Dean and myself, and even omits our names, though we were present by arrangement with your office. Surely you cannot countenance such garbling of official records by the press."

Mr. Goddard also sent a letter to the editor of the Keene Sentinel which he did not publish, but the latest issue of the Peterborough Transcript, in a spirit of fair play, published both the telegram and the letter at the request of the relatives of Dr. Dean. The letter follows:

"May I ask a little space in your columns to enter a statement regarding the way members of my family have been murdered and maligned in your State during the last year and a half?

DEAN BRUTALLY KILLED.

"My mother's brother, W. K. Dean, moved to East Jaffrey thirty years ago and had a very happy home there until August, 1915, when agents of Germany, as we have good reasons to believe, did him to death in a most brutal manner. Ever since that time the Cheshire County Solicitor at Keene has endeavored to promulgate the theory, contrary to all the evidence, that my aunt, Mrs. W. K. Dean, was the murderer.

"At a recent meeting in the Governor's Council Chamber in Concord, my cousin, Henry Dean, and I united with the Selectmen of Jaffrey in an effort to request that an unbiased counsel should be appointed with County Solicitor Pickard for the special consideration of this case in order to secure justice.

"In spite of the fact that both Henry Dean and I addressed the Governor from the floor of the Council Chamber, the Keene Evening Sentinel, purporting to give a full report of the conversation between the various individuals that figured in the conference, wholly omits to mention, not alone what we said, but even the fact that any relatives were present.

"Surely that is not the spirit of New Hampshire. Even if Solicitor Pickard did think that Mrs. Dean was the murderer, that is no reason why the Keene Evening Sentinel should suppress the fact that the Dean relatives were present with the Selectmen to say that the contrary view be given a fair hearing. Respectfully yours.

"WILLIAM DEAN GODDARD."

Rupture Kills 7,000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore, cannot chafe or pinch, but is soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To a used whilst you work and whilst you sleep, no straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended as the rupture CAN'T come back. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., Block 511, St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the information necessary.

Trading Narrow and Dull on Exchange; Curb Market Opens Week

Opening dull but firm the Boston market followed New York and became irregular during the first hour. It showed no improvement later in the morning. It was without breath and narrow as to price changes. It had no trading feature of interest. United Fruit declined a point and recovered. Ahmeek & Swift International advanced a point and fraction each on solitary transactions.

Small gains were made by Boston & Maine, New Haven, American Telephone, Mohawk, National Leather, Carson Hill, Simms Magneto and American Oil and Engineering.

Island Creek sagged two points and New Idria one. Among issues to recede fractionally were Calumet & Arizona, North Butte, Davis Daly, United Shoe and Gray & Davis. In the second hour Ohio Body was showing nearly two points' loss.

The Boston Stock Exchange has listed 16,000 preferred and 100,000 common shares of the Will & Baumer Company and trading in these issues began this morning. The preferred is $100 par; the common without nominal or par value. Transfer agents for the company are International Trust Company of Boston and the Central Union Trust Company of New York. Registrars are the First National Bank of Boston and National Bank of Commerce of New York.

CURB MARKET STARTS WEAK.

The Curb Market was rather weak at the start and trading was only fairly active. Tip Top was the early feature. It was active and after gaining 12 cents lost all the advance and showed 18 cents loss at 25 cents. This was in the first hour. Bagdad Silver, a newcomer to this market, opened at 27 cents and sold at 30 cents. Among gains at the end of an hour were Arizona Silver, ⅛, at 1½; Gilliland, 1, at 41, and White Oil, ½, at 29. Simms Petroleum was off ⅛, at 35¾, and Verde Mines, 6 cents, at 16 cents.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

No dividends have been paid on Warren Brothers common for nearly three years, but earnings last year of $35.65 a share on this issue have fostered hope of a dividend this spring.

Twenty thousand shares of the Bonanza Development Company have been listed on the Boston Stock Exchange. This is a Massachusetts corporation, with $5 par value for its shares, which succeeds the old Colorado company of the same name which had $10 shares.

Holders of the Clinton-Wright Wire Co. common stock are requested to present their stock certificates to the Old Colony Trust Co. or the Mercantile Trust Co., New York, transfer agents in exchange for the stock of the Wickwire-Spencer Steel Co.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK MADE GREAT STRIDES

The First National Bank of Boston has made great strides in fifteen years, its deposits increasing from $35,835,026 to $171,208,963 in that period and its surplus and undivided profits from $2,093,784 to $21,142,626. Up to 1911 its capital was $2,000,000, being increased to $3,000,000 in that year. It was raised to $5,000,000 in 1913 and to $7,500,000 in 1918. This month it will be increased from $7,500,000 to $15,000,000, which will give it working capital exceeding $36,000,000 and the fifth rank among National banks in the United States.

How its deposits, surplus and undivided profits increased from 1904 to 1919 is shown by the following table:

RAILS FAIL TO CLIMB FAR

Change of Road Control Has Little Effect Upon the Market

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon the majority of issues showing losses. The market failed to improve in the second hour and prices at noontime were at about the morning lowest. Trading was of moderate volume. Call money renewed at 10 per cent. Foreign exchange was steady at the start, demand sterling opening unchanged at $3.41¼ and afterwards selling at $3.40¾.

BEGAN WITH A RISE.

The market began with a rise, over Sunday buying orders creating temporary demand for stocks. Outside buying was prompted by the signing of the railroad control bill by President Wilson and return of the carriers to their owners, but rails did not show large gains as a rule at the start. Atchison, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific went up a point or more. Other changes in this department were small. Gains were fractional on the average throughout the list, although a few industrials, including General Motors, Woolen common and Car & Foundry made advances of several points. General Motors had the widest range, advancing more than three points, losing all of the gain and showing as large a loss within half an hour. The market weakened quickly and became irregular. Bears showed plenty of initiative, claiming that the return of the roads had been discounted last week and that prevailing conditions should work against a higher valuation of securities.

SHORT ACCOUNT EXTENDED.

The Saturday demand in the stock loan market indicated an extension of the short account. Trading this morning was as professional in character as it has been at any time this year. The professional element is exceedingly bearish. The money situation accounts for their attitude. It is understood that bankers regard it as somewhat improved, although recent rates have indicated the contrary. The decline of the reserve ratio of the Federal bank system has undermined the confidence of speculators. There has been a great change in the credit situation within six or seven months. The New Bureau quotes a New York banker as saying: "Since August 1, 1919, commercial loans have expanded $1,500,000,000, while in the same time Wall Street loans have been cut in two."

Motors Displacing Horses

Motor trucks are being used on farms to an extent not realized by city people. It is figured that more than 50,000 farmers are using such vehicles. The cost of feeding animals is now so great that even high priced gasoline is more economical. During last year the number of horses on farms and ranches is estimated to have decreased 372,000 to a total of about 21,000,000. Their value aggregated $1,882,542,000 against $2,114,897,000 for the horses employed a year before.

Gold and Silver Movements

Gold imports during the first ten days of February amounted to $286,301, while exports of the yellow metal aggregated $15,952,330. From January 1 to February 10 inclusive, gold exports totalled $63,769,203, and imports amounted to $12,363,752. Silver imports from February 1 to February 10 amounted to $3,260,736, while exports totalled $6,386,186.

Not Cars Enough for Grain

So great is the car shortage in the Northwest that farmers in that region are still holding 11,000,000 bushels of wheat and as much corn or other grains left over from last year's crop. It will take 60,000 box cars to move this surplus. Inability of railroads to handle grain has closed to farmers 400 country elevators in Minnesota and the Dakotas.

Wool Shipments

Wool shipments from Boston from January 1 to February 26 inclusive, aggregated 22,450,500 pounds against 15,207,749 for the corresponding 1919 period. Receipts were 35,879,374 pounds as compared with 37,150,707.

COAL SHORTAGE DUE TO CAR DIVERSION

The coal famine is attributed by the trade to a car shortage growing out of the strike last year when 50,000 cars laden with fuel were diverted from the East to the West. The cars have not been returned and now the East is the sufferer. Many of the cars sent West are said to be still unloaded because consumers will not pay the higher price asked for bituminous in that section.

Lack of cars at mines is reducing production 40 per cent. or more this Winter, while the 1919 output was the smallest since 1915.

Western Union Earnings

The report by the Western Union Telegraph Company to the Interstate Commerce Commission as to last year's earnings shows an increase of $15,887,164 in operating revenue and an increase of $5,574,481 in net. Operating income increased $4,133,091 for the twelve months. For December, 1919, operating revenue increased $1,906,386, but net operating revenue decreased $762,720.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company has resumed, as of this date, the operation of its property, and now solicits, and will endeavor to handle satisfactorily, business to and from all points on or via its lines.

By virtue of its geographical location, The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, tapping as it does the large industrial centers of the interior, and connecting the principal cities of the Seaboard with those of the Mississippi River and Great Lakes, is logically in position to furnish satisfactory transportation service between the Eastern Section and the Middle and Western States.

Regular freight schedules will be established between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington in the East, and Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Columbus, Toledo, Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis and other important centers in the West, and special efforts will be made to maintain regularity of service.

It will be the aim of The Baltimore and Ohio Company in the future, as in the past, to satisfy the reasonable requirements and desires of its patrons, both freight and passenger, and it solicits business solely upon that basis.

(1) To nominate for the Presidency by direct nomination and to elect by popular vote.
(2) To elect the Cabinet officers and make them responsible to Congress.
(3) To deprive the President of the power of patronage; to put all public offices as nearly as possible under Civil Service, and have appointments made by a committee of Congress.

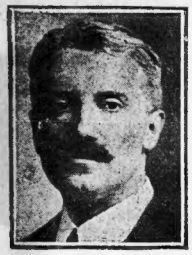
New Secretary of State Brings Fine Qualities Into His Office

President Wilson has made a good appointment in Bainbridge Colby for Secretary of State.

Mr. Colby is better fitted for the place than any one the President has had in it.



BAINBRIDGE COLBY

He is a good lawyer, a polished gentleman, a natural diplomat, a man of convictions with the courage to express and follow them, and has political intuitions which in most instances have proved sound.

This newspaper does not agree with Mr. Colby's views upon the League of Nations. But it is natural to assume that in appointing a successor to Mr. Lansing the President would choose one who thought as he thinks upon that subject.

The fate of the League of Nations, so far as the United States is concerned, will be decided not by what Mr. Colby thinks or by what Mr. Wilson thinks, but by what the American people think, which is the right way in a democracy.

As for the new appointee's alleged lack of experience in international diplomacy and in the so-called traditions of the State Department, so far from it proving a handicap, it ought, under existing circumstances, to prove a recommendation.

Coming newly, Secretary Colby will not be bound by the persistent ineptitude which has characterized so much of the recent activity of that department, particularly in its mishandling of information as to Russia.

It is unthinkable that with his keen sense of fair play and his passion for democratic progress he could be content to permit the continuance of the pro-autocratic distortions and propaganda which have characterized the American Department of State's handling of the Russian problem, notoriously during the past year.

Nor is it conceivable that he could become a party to the subordination of true American to foreign interests or tolerate the blanketing of our commercial opportunities while British competitors connive with eccentric British diplomacy to gain first chances at Russian trade.

In his public life Mr. Colby thus far has been a progressive. When the Republican party, in 1912, chose to stand for special privilege rather than the public good, he went fearlessly into the Progressive party.

When the Progressive party, deserted by its 1912 standard bearer, laid down in 1916, he went with equal fearlessness to the support of President Wilson.

He does not let party labels do his thinking for him. He faces issues as they come.

Such a type of public servant ought to prove a wholesome influence in the executive circle at Washington, if given half a chance.

If not given a fair chance, it is safe to predict that he will not wait to be put out—he will get out, and the public will know why.

Women of State Should Back Miss Spencer's Bill

The Women's Christian Temperance Union is to be commended for its action in endorsing the Spencer Maternity Bill, now before the Legislature, providing State aid for prospective mothers who are unable to provide such aid for themselves. At the Midwinter meeting of the executive committee of the W. C. T. U., the endorsement of this bill was unanimous.

Miss Edna Lawrence Spencer, originator of the bill, points out that there is no stigma of pauperism attached to the receiving of State aid under this proposed measure. Its benefits are limited to women who could not otherwise bear children without undue privation; but the aid given is not construed as charity, but rather a recognition by the State of the asset that well-born and healthy children will be. Cash benefits are provided, so that the mother may exercise some discretion and have the physician of her choice; and further provision is made that in case of aid rendered to unmarried mothers, the fathers shall be sought out and forced to reimburse the State. This, Miss Spencer believes, will operate to lessen illegitimacy.

All women of the State should give their support to this bill. The W. C. T. U. executives, representing 13,000 Massachusetts women, have set the example.

Let all those who want the motherhood of their State to receive the degree of care that breeders give to horses, signify their convictions by backing Miss Spencer's bill.

Sunday Outdoor Sports

An increasing liberal spirit among our clergymen and churchgoers toward the use of Sunday afternoon for outdoor sports is manifesting itself. This is a good sign, for interpretation of what constitutes a day of rest has long been too narrow. The relaxation which we call rest is often better secured by outdoor activity than by mere inertia at home.

Amateur sports at a time when they will not interfere with church-going are health-giving and clean and take the boys off the streets, out of the cellars and barns and back alleys, where they are doing neither themselves nor anybody else any good, and where their usual occupation is playing poker or shooting crap on an idle Sunday afternoon when their idle minds become the devil's workshop.

More Truth Than Poetry

The Clouds of Yesterday

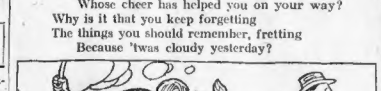
By S. E. KISER

YOU'VE told me all about your ills
And all the wrongs you've had to bear,
How hard it is to pay your bills
And how you're cheated everywhere;
Why is it that you can't be learning
To say a word sometimes concerning
The good you're finding here and there?

I'VE listened often to your sighs
And often I have seen you frown;
You never let your spirit rise;
Why are you always looking down?
Why mourn the past and hate the present,
And seem to think that all things pleasant
Are over in some other town.

WHY is it that you can't forget
The hardships you have had to meet;
Why grieve about old bruises yet
And find old scandals to repeat?
What comfort do you find in choosing
To kneel at springs long dry, refusing
To look for waters that are sweet?

I'VE heard the names of all your foes,
Men who have wronged you, as you say;
Why don't you ever speak of those
Whose cheer has helped you on your way?
Why is it that you keep forgetting
The things you should remember, fretting
Because 'twas cloudy yesterday?



A ROSE OF YESTERYEAR

She sits behind the scenes alone; her eyes are wet, her heart is sad;
Ah, what sweet triumphs she has known, what happy moments she has had!
No curtain-calls for her tonight, no loud applause to thrill her heart:
They have her cast, oh, cruel spite! to do her first old woman part!

THE LINES WERE CROSSED

"You have three children," said the fortune teller.
"Nothing of the kind," replied the lady, withdrawing her hand and refusing to submit to further insults. "I keep two Pekinese poodles."

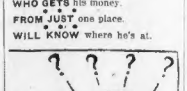
DAVID FRANKLIN Houston,
SECRETARY OF the Treasury,
MY DEAR Dave,

YOU'VE BEEN a farmer,
AND YOU'VE been the president
OF AN agricultural college,
AND YOU know the troubles
THAT COMMON people have,
WITH THEIR bank books,
AND FINANCIAL statements,
AND EVERYTHING else,
THAT PERTAINS to money
EXCEPT WHEN they have it
RIGHT in their hands,
AND BECAUSE of that,
I WANT to ask you,
IF YOU can't sit down,
AND FIGURE some way
SO ALL of the millions
OF SALARIED men
IN THE United States,
WON'T BE driven crazy,
WITH THE silly blanks
THAT THEY have to fill out
FOR THEIR income taxes,
AND I want to tell you
THAT THE blank I have
IS NEARLY all wasted
WITH A lot of stuff
ABOUT STOCKS and bonds
AND WHERE did you get it,
AND DID you spend any of it,
AND HOW much did you lose,
AND DID you hire anybody,
AND ARE you living with your wife,
AND IS she the same wife,
THAT YOU had last year,
AND SURTAX columns,
AND FISCAL years,
AND IN the whole statement,
ALL I can use
IS WHO I am,
AND WHERE I live,
AND HOW much did I get
FROM JAN. 1 to Jan. 1,
AND WHO gave it to me,
AND I can put it all,
IN JUST two lines,
AND A couple of columns,
DOWN AT the bottom,
AND SIGN my name,
AND SWEAR it is right,
AND THERE are millions of men,
WHO CAN do the same,
AND THE other columns,
AND OTHER lines,
ABOUT STOCKS and bonds,
AND MONEY paid out,
AND DID you have any losses,
DON'T MEAN a thing,
AND JUST waste paper,
AND PRINTER'S ink
AND I want to ask you,
IF BEFORE next year,
IF YOU'RE still on the job,
IF YOU can't get a blank
JUST FOR men like me,
AND GET a farmer to do it,
OR AN office boy
OR SOMEBODY else
WHO WILL do it right,
SO AN ordinary man
WHO GETS his money
FROM JUST one place
WILL KNOW where he's at.



I THANK YOU.

DOES CITY'S HEAT WARM UP THE AIR?

By Garrett P. Serviss

A CORRESPONDENT to whom I might have addressed the same question asks whether the heat generated in great cities has a perceptible effect upon atmospheric temperatures within the city's limits.

This seems like asking whether it is warmer around a bonfire than away from it. Nevertheless, if the bonfire is a very feeble one, and much interfered with by invading currents of air, its effects may be so widely and quickly dispersed that a doubt could be entertained.

Much Depends on Location

With regard to atmospheric effects of civic activities, much depends, I think, upon the location and surroundings of a great city.

If it lies, like Paris and London, in a basin or depression of the land, and at a distance from the sea or other great body of water, and with no high mountains near, the heat generated by its familiary and factory fires should be more effective in atmospheric warming than if the situation resembles that of New York, or Boston, of Philadelphia, or Chicago, where there is readier play for external atmospheric influences.

In the Summer

But in any case, if there were any means of exact measurement, it would be found that, on the average, taking the whole area of the city into account, there is a gain of atmospheric temperature from the artificial sources of heat.

Nobody would doubt this in the Summertime, when the heat of the air around places where hot fires are kept becomes almost unbearable.

Letters to the Editor

For Free Speech

Editor Boston American:

I wish to thank you sincerely for the generous publicity which your paper has given to the Irish Loan drive and the speeches of its freedom-loving supporters. It is sure to go "over the top," and the Friends of Irish Freedom fully appreciate the genuine merit of the Boston American. Sincerely yours, for free speech and free press. JOHN QUINN.

Wilson and Italy

Editor Boston American:

I am convinced that President Wilson's opposition to Italy is a strong personal hate—a hate which he displayed some years ago in his American history, when he asserted that the Italians were less civilized than the Chinese. From such a man Italy has little to expect in her favor on the Adriatic settlement.

Forced the Change

Editor Boston American:

I wish to congratulate you upon the coup d'etat which you scored in forcing the President to suddenly change his mind about the sale of the German fleet. You have accomplished more than the Senate has been able to do about the peace treaty, and I had begun to think that his position was impregnable until you vividly demonstrated how weak the President was before the will of the people as represented by the Hearst papers. Warrants for Arrest

Editor Boston American:

What kind of justice or gratitude is the city collector of Boston showing towards the ex-service men by placing in the hands of constables, warrants calling for their arrest for non-payment of a 1918 poll tax levied upon them while they were serving their country at $30 per month, also in demanding that if they were in the service during 1918 that they bring their discharge papers to the constable's office?

It seems to me that it would require no more of the collector's valuable time to ascertain whether a man was in the service in 1918 than it does to issue said warrants and certainly it would be a more decent way of settling the matter.

The Mikado's Worry
Don't Decry Marriage
A Big Monroe Doctrine
Truly British Home Rule

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1920)

Looking rapidly over the earth, through the columns of newspapers, you observe that:

The Mikado dissolves his Parliament, fearing to face the issue of manhood suffrage for Japan. What England and America are about to do for women, Japan has not yet done for men. An ordinary workman there cannot vote. When all Japan votes, problems will arise to keep Japan busy at home. The Mikado knows it.

There is another notch on the Mexican gun. This time the American killed is past eighty, so it must have been easy. The English show us how simply Mexico may be made more polite, when the time comes, about one year from this Spring.

British forces numbering 26,000 have been withdrawn from Mesopotamia, the rich region where civilization started on earth, and where England now rules. Five hundred flying men, with bombs and searchlights, will do the work of 26,000, overawing the natives. England will make Egypt the centre of her flying machine activities. A flock of flying machines kept within reach of India, Persia, etc., will give England a fleet in the air more important than her fleet at sea. England has statesmen that know how to do things promptly.

Miss Peggy Marsh, mother, unmarried, of a rich man's son, says: "In a few years the necessity of a marriage ceremony will be done away with."

More profound thought will make the lady realize that it has taken the human race a thousand centuries to get marriage fairly started, and it will take at least another hundred centuries to make men fit for marriage.

If Peggy Marsh could remember incarnations in which she lived in a cave and was hitched to the plow by her master when a younger lady appeared, she would know that marriage means a great deal to women and has helped to civilize men.

England is about to make women real equals of men in politics. Women will vote exactly as men vote. At present a woman must be thirty before she can vote, which is a joke considering that many girls at fourteen are more mature mentally than their brothers of twenty-one.

Lady Astor, contributed by the United States to the House of Commons, put it mildly when she said that a woman at eighteen is "older and wiser" than a man of twenty-five.

That young woman made a good reply to someone who spoke of her election as a circus: "Well, I can tell them that the lady elected was not the clown." English women at the polls will outnumber the men by half a million, an excellent thing for Englishmen.

Foreign prime ministers accept gracefully President Wilson's emphatic statement and orders. They say they never dreamed of settling the Adriatic question without getting the views of the United States. This looks a little like extending the Monroe Doctrine to all Europe, and we should be very proud.

The average American, perhaps, would be content to let Europe attend to the Adriatic, Mediterranean, Baltic, Caspian and Black Seas, Europe in return permitting the United States to regulate these two continents and the waters adjacent.

England publishes a Home Rule bill. Ireland wanted one Legislature. She is to have two, one north, one south; one Protestant, one Catholic.

England gives to each a million pounds to start in business, but Ireland will continue paying to England eighteen million pounds a year, forty-two per cent. charged the north, the most prosperous section, fifty-eight per cent. against the south, which has more population, less wealth.

A "joint exchequer board" will decide how much taxation Ireland can stand in future. This board will have representatives from the two Irish Parliaments, from the British Imperial government and "an independent chairman." What will the Catholic part of Ireland, the Home Rule section, have on that board?

The English reserve to themselves all matters affecting the Crown, peace and war, dealings with other nations, the army and navy, coining money, treason, foreign trade, postoffice, telegraph, navigation, including merchant ships, wireless messages, cablegrams, and the collection of income taxes, excess profit taxes, customs and excises.

Under this Home Rule bill, Ireland will have the right to do a little more worrying, but mainly else in the way of rights.
